A republic is an aristocracy of orators, interrupted at times by the monarchy of The United States is the first nation in the world's history to have three cities of over 1,000,000 each. A huge elm tree is the center of a rail road station in Soho, W. Va. The roof is shaped like an umbrella.

There were two ties in York county, Neb., as the result of the late election, and lots were drawn to decide the result. One hundred thousand dollars will put into seeds and $725,000 in experimenta agricultural stations this year. The men outnumber the women in Chi cago, the excess of males over twenty-one years of age being nearly 80,000. Recent improvements in electric motor would seem to indicate that the days of horse railroads are drawing to a close.

Strange Indian Heads. Among the Indians of North America many strange beliefs are held respecting demon heads that wander about, some- A. C. Taylor, Ellicott City, Md. times harmlessly and at other times for malignant purposes. Some of them are of gigantic size, with wings, while others have faces of fire.

There used to be a society among the the Iroquois organized for the purpose of propitiating these extraordinary terrors. The latter, according to popular conception, most commonly moved about from tree to tree in solitary places, where they were apt to be encountered, much to the discomfort of hunters and women who chanced to be alone in the forest. Few things can be imagined more disagreeable than to meet unexpectedly in the woods a great head six feet high, without legs, arms or body. Occasionally these remarkable creatures would talk, but it was chiefly at night that they had a fiery aspect, their favorite nocturnal haunts being marshes and pools. Members of the exercising society wore masks in imitation of the heads when they performed ceremonie for the purpose of driving such demons away. Of course the fire faces were invented to account for the jack-o'-lanterns or "ignes fatui" which haunt moist places.-Washington Star.

Kitchen Work a Proud Occupation. Kitchening seems to be the only species of work that no one need blush for. and, after all, does not hunger justify the means? In the midst of that period of the French revolution known as the reign of terror, did not the ex-Capucine monk, Chabot (an expert in the science of good living) invent the "omelette truffee aux pointes d'asperges," and also "a la puree de pintades?" Did you know that it was to the elector of Bavaria that we owe the "bavaroise," which was prepared and made under his own eyes for the first time at the Cafe Procope? Modern history also offers noble examples to our admiration. The Empress Elizabeth, of Austria, that accomplished horsewoman, that sovereign of a court where aristocratic prejudices are of the strongest kind, glories in her talent as a pastry cook. Her daughter, the Archduchess Valeria, boasts of having penetrated all the secrets of the ancient and modern cuisine. Queen Victoria is very fond of making omelets, and it seems

The fact that all the so called "doubtful" states, whose vote is decisive in the election this year, are to cast their ballots in absolute secrecy, free from all espionage portance. The first and inevitable effect will be to lessen enormously the part which money will play in the contest. Every state in which money has heretofore been used most freely has adopted the new system. If votes be bought in those states hereafter the purchaser cannot follow the men whom they have bought to the polls to see if they keep their bad barwill be bought.

gain. The result will be the same in those states as it has been everywhere else under similar conditions—namely, very few votes This is a novel phase of a presidential parties will do well to take into consideration in selecting their campaign managers for this year. If money is no longer to be the controlling factor in the election, will it be either expedient or wise to put a pro-fessional corruptionist in charge of the campaign of either party? On the con-trary, will it not be the highest political wisdom to put men of character in charge of all the committees, national, state, district and other?—Century. The Development of Andirons.

nament has developed various features of the andiron. The crossbar, not unusual in large wrought iron andirons, was original-ly a simple unornamented piece of iron, de-signed as a foot rest, in order that wet and muddy boots might be dried by the wearer in front of the burning logs. The bar nowadays is incrusted with so many ornaments that it has ceased to be a comfortable footrest. The supplementary shaft on large andirons had originally a single knob of scription to "Womankind" one office of the creeper, but now it has developed into a variety of forms, many of them highly ornamental. Various rings and hooks for the hang-mere ornaments, the practice of cooking before an open fire having given way before the advance of the kitchen range and the gas stove. The defect of the elaborate modern andirons lies partly in the fact that designers have been ignorant or regardless of the uses for which features of the old andirons were intended, and have developed them into meaningless ornament.

His Faith Shaken. A tailor would have sized his waist measure at 48 inches, and as he stepped ou commission house on South Water
