ICE CLEAR AS CRYSTAL.

The Water of Lake Baikal In Siberia Is a Remarkable Sight. In eastern Siberia lies Lake Baikal, which Know that's why the is a mile deep and has an area one-third greater than Lake Erie. From November to April it is frozen, and as the lake is part of the commercial highway between Russia and China it is crossed in winter upon the Stop and think that Ammonia is only worth about three cents a had a thin layer of snow over it, but we gradually left this sort of dazzling white carpet and at length reached the clear ice, when I saw around me the most wonderful and bewitching sight I ever beheld. Owing to the transparency of the water the ice presented everywhere the appearance of polished crystal, and although undoubtedly of great thickness was so colorless that it was like passing over space. It gave me at first an uncanny feeling to look over the side of the sledge down into the black abyss beneath. This feeling, however, gradually changed to one of fascination, till at last I found it positively difficult to withdraw my gaze from the awful depth, with nothing but this sheet of crystal between me and eternity. I believe that most travelers on crossing the lake on the ice for the first time experience the same weird and fasci-

About half way across I stopped to make a sketch and take some photographs. It was no easy matter, as I found on getting out of the sledge, for the ice was so slippery that, in spite of my having felt snow boots on, I could hardly stand. The deathlike silence of the surroundings was occasionally broken, however, by curious sounds, as though big guns were being fired at some little distance. They were caused by the cracking of the ice here and there. I was told that in some parts of the lake were huge fissures through which the water could be seen.

It is for this reason that it is always advisable to do the journey by daylight. We reached Mouishkay, on the opposite coast, exactly 4½ hours after leaving Liestbenitz, the horses having gone the whole distance of 30 miles with only two stoppages of a few minutes each. It was evidently an easy bit of work for them, as they seemed as fresh when we drew up in the postyard as when they started in the morning.-

"Arctic Ocean." Rondside Crosses In Italy. "The traveler in Europe, and especially in some parts of Europe, comes continually across those relics of the feudal days, the roadside shrine and the milestone cross," said Harry G. Selfridge, who is "putting up" at the Laclede for a day of rest and recreation. "In Italy they are most numerous, dotting every crossroad and hilltop, every spring and shady nook where one might lie down during the noonday heat and rest. It seems that these shrines are considered havens of rest by the poor and the the day footsore and ragged pedestrians throwing themselves at full length before these images of the Virgin and the Christ and weeping in bitterest distress. It is not alone to pray that many of these pilgrims come, not alone to pour out their woes to a pictured ideal, an ever willing ear, they frequently come to die, "Annually many persons end their lives before these images, sinking down bleeding and praying, staining the pure green grass with their hearts' blood. We talk about skeletons in the closet; about the hidden sorrows of this world. They are not in the closets, I should judge, from these instances. They are prowling abroad in the sunshine, haggard life ghosts, seeking rest and never finding; seeking a kind, forgiving heart and being eventually compelled to fly to this unknown spirit of mercy and there in the sunlight to pour out their woes to the maker and cast off this life in despair. These crosses are really remarkable, and the many woes they stand record of make them doubly precious in the eyes of the poor and the ignorant. That is what I call one of the interesting things about Europe."

-St. Louis Globe-Democrat. And the Orchestra Played. "Why is it that women are always so jealous and suspicious of each other?" asked the professor in a plaintive voice of the lady with whom he had been dancing. "Oh, because they know each other so well. Now, there's that Kate Lawson. Do you know what she told young Anderson

"No. Please enlighten me." "She said she had one of the most eligible young fellows in town at her feet. Such a whopper, when everybody knows she's never had a single offer!" "I can prove the truth of Miss Lawson's assertion," said the professor in his cold, calm voice that sounded like a brook gurgling over broken glass. "Oh, were you the man?" spitefully.

"No," not in the least disconcerted, "she was buying her wedding shoes and the man at her feet was the clerk who was fitting "Her wedding shoes! You don't mean to say that that girl has at last caught a hus-

The Perils of Sympathy. There was a well fed, prosperous looking woman of strident voice on one of the suburban trains the other morning, and above its roar and rattle her accents could be distinguished telling the story of the friend who was visiting her.

"Your emember Lou, of course," she said "Well, she's been staying with me since last week. And, you know, the funnies thing has happened. Lou—that's her name —always had a way of adopting other peo-ple's habits awfully easily. Adaptability, I suppose, some people call it. For instance, if she was with a gay crowd she was gay, and with sober people she was sober. She hadn't been in our house three days before she got to talking as loud as if some one was deaf. And when I spoke to her about it—half joking, you know—she said she had supposed from my talking so loud that Robert was deaf, and so she had spoken above her ordinary tone. Now, what I'd like to know, Kate, is if my voice is unusually loud. Tell me the truth."

The car listened breathlessly. When Kate did the kind hearted thing, sacrificing

"There! I was sure of it! Something's the matter with Lou, and I shall advise her to consult an aurist."-Chicago Times. "Dove" Whist:

her desire to be honest in her instinct to be kindly, and said that she had never thought so, the lady with the voice said

A "dove" whist class is one of the winter's occupations for 16 young women of this city. They meet once a week from 11 to 2, and a simple luncheon breaks the absorbing games promptly at 1 o'clock. By 2 o'clock they have separated, leaving time for any afternoon engagement. "We are tired," said one of the members, "of being politely snubbed by men when a game of whist is suggested. You know how they will refer to 'ladies' whist,' and we propose to become thoroughly posted in the game. We have the best authorities and play the most modern and approved game. A little box stands on every one of the four tables, into which a penny is dropped for every word uttered during the playing of a hand, and the offense of asking what is trump can only be condoned by the payment of a dime.

"These are our only regulations. After Easter we expect to give a whist party, each member inviting one man, who must be a good whist player to be eligible, to test the skill we expect to have acquired by that time."-Her Point of View in New York Times.

Electric Cats In Philadelphia. The trolley line along Bainbridge and Catharine streets is responsible for a new race of cats, which is being reared in the neighborhood through which the electric and can only be compared to other cats as a unfortunate, for you can see at all hours of full grown Newfoundland dog can be compared to a waddling pup. This great physical vigor and wonderful development is due to a course of electric treatment to which they subject themselves. Every night when the travel along those streets has subsided the cats can be seen coming out for their treatment. There is just enough electricity in the rails to answer their purpose, and first they lick the rails fondly. Then they roll on the rails and wallow in the electrical fluid and act in every way as if they were under the influence of catnip dissipation. After a few minutes of this they get up and dance around like pup pets on a string. These exhibitions are of nightly occurrence, and the windows of the thoroughfares are crowded with eager spectators.-Exchange.

Honoring a Reformer. Mrs. Caroline B. Buell, reading the stories told at the Washington suffrage convention of the naming of calves, mules, etc., after prominent reformers, is reminded of a similar incident. She says: "A temperance worker in Indian Territory, whose heart was all right, whatever else might be Riid, once wrote me: 'At last I have secured money enough to buy a pony to use in my temperance work. I have named it Frances Willard and have tied a white ribbon on its tale." This is certainly a unique way of honoring the white ribbon. It is the reverse of the method adopted in France during the war in La Vendee, when the royal ists tied red, white and blue cockades to the ends of their horses' tails in order to show their contempt for the colors of the tepublic .- Poston Woman's Journal.

A gentleman performed the clever feat at a Birmingham Shakespeare club of proposing the toast of the poet's memory for nineteen years without repeating himself—a feat which most of us will envy.

Advertising Started It, Merit Made It Pop

Dr. T. P. Hubbell, who is engaged in the drug business at Wolcott, Vt., says 'Advertising started the sale on Chamber lain's Cough Remedy here, but it now sells on its own merits, and all who use it speak highly of it." When troubled with a cough or cold, give it a trial and you will be more than pleased with the result. It is also a certain cure for croup in children. 50 cent bottle for sale by W R. Rudy, Mt.
