CLEVELAND ALL RIGHT. There have been newspaper rumors in the air that Mr. Cleveland's policy as to appointments would be of the most rigid character; that editors of newspapers, as a class, were to be conspicuous marks of his disapprobation. Subsequent reports. and some appointments and appointments pending, have considerably modified and smoothed off the wrinkled front of the alleged stern policy, and we are in doubt whether Mr. Cleveland has issued any edicts of the kind. He has too much common sense. We have no doubt it is the desire of Mr. Cleveland to rectify what he believes to be and practical administration as is possible, but the appointments already made show that he is a Democrat, and believes in Democrats and Democratic doctrine, He recognizes the fact that it will be impossible for him to successfully establish a policy with an army of men under him who will oppose him whenever the opportunity offers. He recognizes the fact, also, that in the Democratic party there are people just as honest and capable as in the ranks of the party which he overcame. Mr. Cleveland is a politician himself. He knows well that it will be his duty, not only as a politician, but as a statesman, to husband straight one only 150 yards in a distance upon—political reform. It was he, and he alone, who sounded the tocsin of war against an unjust policy, at a time, too, when his coadjutors thought inopportune and suicidal. But it seems he knew what he was doing. The cyclone is past, and he now floats buoyantly on a calm sea, and whether he ever had any idea of reaching it or not, he now sits master of the

Mr. Cleveland is well acquainted with the demand of the country. It is that the ideas which he has promulgated and fearlessly adhered to should prevail, and the country well knows and expects that the office holders, as far as is consistent with the public welfare, should be his adherents. Any other policy would be the throwing away of a great opportunity, if not suicide itself. WHY NOT POSSESS HAWAII? Some objections have come from influential sources to accepting the Sandwich Islands, which have been so freely, fully and unqualifiedly offered us by the revolutionists of Hawaii, who recently obtained possession of the government. Why should we not possess the country? Unseemly haste an our part should be condemned, but if the revolution is actual, and the late dynasty a thing of the past, we can see no valid objection to our consistently numbering the country among our list of States or Territaries, as the case may be. Of late it has been the policy of the country to create a navy, not an insignificant one, but one of formidable strength. This has been found necessary to preserve the honor and dignity of the country. We construct this navy either to prevent war or to be formidable in war. Hawaii lies nearly midway between this country and China. Some day not many years hence ulation, and will in time have a powerful navy. Complications between this country and China already exist, and it a saving of over $11,000 in the expense would seem good foresight on our part of carriage, which, capitalized at 6 per to own the islands, as, from a strategic be expended in the improvement, which, point of view, they would be invaluable, at a moderate expense of $2,000 a mile. not only in case of trouble with China, but at any time that our interests on the Pacific ocean are likely to be jeopardized. for further improvement. ROAD BUILDING.

The Cost of Bad Roads and How Go Roads Pay for Themselves. Prof J. D. Warfield, of Brookeville, Montgomery county, writes to the Balimore Sun as follows:

"Every judicious improvement in the

Their faults are those of direction, of slope, of shape, of surface and of deficiency generally n all the attributes of good roads." Both sentiments grow in value as they ring down the corridors of time. We begin now to consider a question, which, next to that living one just settled by our thoughts till better lights are along the line. Improved machinery has added over five and a-quarter millions of acres to the cultivated area of farming lands since 1870, and roads are demanded to relieve the blockade of freight transpor-

Millions of dollars have been lost to farmers because they have not yet been able to sell when the markets are best or account of the impassable condition of our leading outlets. Had the money levied yearly from tax-pavers for the repair and making of roads been directed toward macadamizing yearly, a rich sements which in the financial world inheritance instead of this crying de-would be accepted without a moment's mand would have been ours.

Two thousand years ago the Romans. then conquerors of England built for themselves roads worthy of inspection. llaving marked out parallel furrows. they removed the earth and upon the hard pan were then put two courses of large tlat stones, laid in mortar. Next came a concrete of broken stone with quick lime, pounded with a rammer. The third course was broken bricks, tiles and pottery mixed with lime. Into this mass were imbedded the large wrong, and to give the country as clean blocks of stone which formed the pave ment. These were so perfectly fitted their joints were scarcely seen. The entire thickness of the four strata was about three feet. If the road passed over marshy ground the foundation stones rested on a framework of timber. On each side of the road were paved footpaths and parapets with stones at regular intervals for mounting on horseback, whilst milestones marked the distance to all parts of the empire.

cape the miasma of an undeveloped country, built residences upon hills, retaining the roads leading to them as their general highways. We have been forced for years to climb hills, when by going around perfect levels, with attendant comfort and speed, might have been se-scientific experience: The horizontal length of a road may be increased by twenty times the perpendicular height which is to be saved; that s, to escape a hill one hundred feet high we may extend its length two thousand feet, modified by friction in ooth cases. A road that rises one hunlred feet in two thousand compels the ictual lifting up of one-twentieth of the whole load just one hundred feet. By going around that hill we not only remedy this, but save half the cost of carriage. The dynomometer has conclusively shown that a horse can draw three times as much upon a broken stone road as over a gravel one. This two-thirds expense of carriage if properly considered would return an annual interest sufficient to meet a permanent investment for such improvements. Again, if wheat sell at 95 cents a bushel in the city and it cost us on bad roads fully 20 cents to get it to market, and by improved roads we can reduce that expense to 8 cents there remains some 12 cents per bushel from which we may claim an actual gain. Suppose again a tol! of two cents will pay a dividend upon the improvement we still have gain of 10 cents a bushel. Whilst, then, upon the black-board of science "a straight line is the shortest distance between two points," upon the practical road of travel "the longest way around is the shortest way Let us look at some figures home.'

upon this thought: A law of physics establishes the fact that resistance of gravity, due to inclination, is equal to the whole weight multiplied by the height of the plane and livided by its length. Thus, if the inclination be one in twenty the resistance will be one-twentieth of its weight. The ordinary friction on a level road is onefortieth, which, added to the above, gives three-fortieths, gravity being twothirds of the whole. Upon a rough road, half as good, gravity will be one-half, since absolutely gravity is always the same upon the same level, but relatively less upon a rough road. Let us now estimate the advantages of improvement. Taking the actual average of friction as one-twentieth of the weight and the average power of a horse, though never settled definitely by experiments, at Watt's estimate of 33,900 nounds raised one foot in one minute, or 100 pounds for ten hours a day at the rate of three miles per hour, it would require on a road of fifteen miles, to car an annual burden of 25,000 tons, an annual expense in horse power of over $18,000. Reducing now by macadamizing the surface friction to one-fiftieth only 10,000 horse power is required, cent., would create a fund of $185,000 to would give us seventy-five miles of road over which our annual saving may thus be extended, thus creating a new fund of raising such funds will be discussed in future papers. Let us see now if it will pay us to go round our hills rather than over them.

Take a hill one mile long, with an ascent of one in ten and descending with the same slope. A level road can be secured by going one mile further. Upon this new road there is no inclination to be overcome. The force of draught from friction is over eight hundred days of a horse and the force of draught from gravity will take over 1.500 more. On the new road there will be no clination but one mile more in length, weather which lurks in the a saving of nearly $1,000, which would thus build the mile of new road, or in-our three mile route around the hill. Again, improved roads increase traffic speed and development-all adding to the freight travel, and, therefore, to the income of the road. The last proposition has been thoroughly tested in the last few years in a county of New Jersey, lying, as ours does, within sight of establishment of roads and bridges in- a great city. My facts are from the pen Mr. Chauncey B. Ripley, LL.D., of Westfield, N. J.

Some forty miles of Telford road costing about four hundred thousand dollars, were built in the years '89 and and Professor Gillespie, of Union Col- '90 from trap rock mined from the ege, author of an exhaustive treatise Orange mountains. The money was obapon roads, utters these startling words: tained on bonds of the county. Along The common roads of our country the line of those roads land has increased from 50 to 300 per cent. These roads have paid for themselves already in the development of real estate. One and one-half millions of dollars in one year have been added to the taxable basis in a section that covers only one-half of the county. The increase of taxes on this sum alone will pay the yearly interest on the cost of the roads, leaving suralmost universal consent, is to occupy charge the entire bonded debt as it falls plus enough, if put at interest, to disdue. We who are thus hesitating to indorse the bonded system because it will be leaving a debt of great magnitude to our children, may herein learn that the debt has really been transformed into an inheritance that will cause our children to rise up and bless us.

BISSELL, O., Nov. 29, 1892.—I desire to say that I have great faith in Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for the cure of throat and lung troubles; also for croup. -E. W. McCollum. There is good reason why Mr. McCollum should have confidence in this remedy. It will cure a severe cold in less time than any other treatment. There is nothing that will loosen and relieve a cold so quickly. It will not only cure croup, but if used as soon as the first symptoms appear it will prevent the attack. 50 cent bottles for sale by W. R. Rudy, Mt. Airy, and A. C. Taylor, Ellicott City, Md.
