Great and Small. "Aren't you creadfully afraid, Kitty?" asked one young girl of another, around whom she was excitedly fluttering, giving little pokes and twitches to her draperies and adjusting her flowers. "I don't see how you can appear so calm. Why, I'm as nervous as a witch! Of course it's interesting to meet distinguished people, and l wouldn't miss it for anything. You know how I've been looking forward to it for weeks, but now the time has actually come, I'm so frightened all I can think of is that I wish I wasn't ashamed to run away and hide in the cloak closet. What can I find to say to a live great man? What can he want to say to me? We nobodies will only be in the way when the somebodies come. Let's pretend we're taken suddenly ill and go home."

Kitty laughed and shook her head. She was older than the other, and usually the in the universe except the world and man shy one of the two, but for once the conditions seemed reversed. "I think it's because of the somebodies that I'm not afraid," she answered. "You know how timid I am in society usually. Well, the only time in my life I ever attended a large reception and felt sufficiently self possessed to enjoy it was once when the first person I was introduced to was the poet Longfellow. I was quite young, as you know, and almost too shy to look at him for the first few moments, but he spoke to me in such a way that presently I found myself answering quite naturally, and then really talking, and then asking questions and feeling quite at home. He put me so beautifully and simply at my ease that it was impossible to be self conscious even after

The Woman Lobbyist In Washington. There are some fictions concerning the capitol at Washington. Among them is one that the woman lobbyist is a power, and that her wiles and arts are successfully employed on the most eminent statesmen in congress. It is true that there are women lobbyists and that some of them years ago were eminently successful. There is nothing, however, so false as the idea that the woman obbyist is a frequent spectacle, or that she has now any influence whatever on congressmen or on legislation. The average congressman is a respectable and self respecting man. It must be borne in mind that most members of the house of representatives and of the senate come from rural communities, and, as a rule, no man can be chosen from a rural community to a respectable public position who does not-at least apparently—walk in the paths of propriety. It may be that his reputation is false, but he is intent on preserving it at all events, and consequently "it would not o," in the language of those who understand the full value of propriety, for a man who counts on continuing to receive the favors of a rural constituency to be seen very often in conversation with a professional woman lobbyist. Nor would the subject on which she desired to converse with him be likely to interest him if he were a man of position and character. No one who is in the habit of loing business with the national legislature, or whose affairs are of sufficient importance to demand caution and intelligence in their transaction, would employ a woman lobbyist. The first friend he met, if he had no local attorney, would warn aim off .- N. L. Nelson in Harper's Weekly.

Diamond Diggers on the Vanl. I have just had a few days among the river diamond diggers near liebron, on the Vaal. The work here is carried on by individual diggers, each man leasing his claim and working it himself with the aid of a few native laborers. They are a motley crowd, these diggers, and representative of almost every nationality. It is a hard and precarious existence. Diamonds are few and far between, but when found nevertheless they are generally of first class quality and realize high prices. The diggers are mostly men of very small means. Their tools and washing gear are about all they have, and they consequently live very poorly. Meal of rough quality is often the only food that passes their lips from one month's end to another. This they usually get on credit from some storekeeper, who furnishes them with the bare necessities of life on the off chance of their finds. Most of the diggers of course have a find some time or other, though there are strange instances of ill luck following the quest for diamonds year after year.

I had a conversation with one old man who had been at this sort of work for 19 years, and I am afraid to say how long it is since he has had a turn of luck. He had lived nearly all this time on meal, and there he was toiling away at about the hardest work man can undertake, yet seemed willing to go on to the end. This labor, however, though heavy, has a wonderful fascination for those who once take to it. A very fine stone had been found a few days before my arrival. It was valued between £700 and £800. - Jewelers' Circular.

Rev. Dr. Dallinger delivered a lecture at Bristol the other night on the planets around us and their possible habitability. Speaking of Mercury, Dr. Dallinger pointed out its chief features and showed that they approximated to those of the earth. Al hough the heat from the sun there was more intense, it might be tempered by the character of the atmosphere. Venus was yet more akin to our world in every respect so that life there, as we know it, was yet more possible. The conditions of the atmosphere indeed were such that the whole globe might be habitable. Mars came next under review, the lecturer explaining its character, substance, atmosphere and other features, which he said made the existence of creatures, if not man, quite possible People were slowly losing their former no tions that there were nothing and nobody There were other worlds, however, which as far as human intelligence could judge were not yet suitable for habitation, but were gradually assuming conditions which might ultimately make life possible. The lecturer held the opinion that many rears hence some means of mental communication with the denizens of the other planets might be established. In the present days of marvelous discoveries in science all things seemed possible, and the estabishment of intercommunication of some kind between this earth and the beings of the planets did not seem more improbable or impossible than the sending of a telegraph message from England to New York eemed 100 years ago .- Pall Mall Budget.

The Study of Philately. Philately is a study. It is a pursuit that adds more to the life of the young collector than any other of his pleasures. Philately in the present generation is assuming vast proportions as an instructive science and is even now a formidable rival of numismatics. No longer is it called a mania or a craze, but a science teaching the geography, history, language and the morals of a country. Our philatelists are not mere schoolboys and girls, although they collect stamps, but men of mature minds: men well established in business and professions, men of sound judgment, intellectual and thoughtful men. And it is this fact that gives the young collector encouragement, the knowledge that such men do exist in the ranks of Bilatelists.—Ohio State Journal.

Whatever be the final choice of colors for the general harmonious decorating of each room, one must always take good care and $15, now only to follow a gradation either ascending or de scending and not preceded by brusque-almost brutal-contrasts. Thus a room can be called correctly decorated and furnished when it starts with a rather light colored carpet, followed by furniture upholstered in slightly darker but still gay colors, the walls a shade more somber, and finally the ceiling of a darker but not mournful hue The contrary order may be followed without disobeying approved and safe principles Strictly to be avoided is an arrangement somewhat as follows: Light colored carpet dark colored upholstery; bright wall tinting and finally a darker ceiling. Such heretical displays are met among us every day and do much toward hindering that educa tion of the eye which might help develop among us a race of budding artists.—Max Maury in Belford's.

Raising Canary Birds. In Germany the poorer classes are nearly all engaged in raising canaries. Several hundred thousand are shipped every year to all parts of the world, There is no industry like it in existence. The birds are strong and hardy and require very little attention; consequently among the peasantry every family has is aviary, which is a constant source of income, independent of the proceeds of their daily toil. The buyers for the New York houses make periodical trips through the country; the birds are bough and are soon on their way to America, where they quickly become accustomed to their gilded cages .- Pittsburg Record.

Shapes for Folding Napkins. About 1050 Pierre David published th "Maistre d'Hostel," "which teaches how to wait on a table properly, and how to fold all kinds of table napkins in all kinds of shapes." The shapes were: "Square, twisted folded in bands and in the forms of a
