WHAT CONSTITUTES WEALTH. Amid all the talk and discussion as to what constitutes prosperity it may be observed that the country settles down into a feeling of security when it is announced that the crops are good. Republican teaching has been that the country is prosperous only when manufacturing is booming. The wealth of the country comes out of the ground in the shape of agricultural products. These products constitute wealth because they are an everyday necessity, and their inca cuiable value is felt only when silver coinage nearly a quarter of a they are scarce. It is easy to be seen first prosper before the country can hope for material prosperity in a general way. Food is worth more than its weight in gold under certain conditions and any policy that will put the agricultural interest on a desirable footing will ensure prosperity to the country. The Republicans having been working on a false theory will account for the present disturbed condition of the country. The committee of Ways and Means is holding hearings so that all interests likely to

The mere emptying of the treasury. however, would not create a deficit such as is threatened if the revenue-producing machinery of the government were equal to the demands upon it. Unfortunately it is not; and here again the Republican party is directly and wholly responsible. The devices by which revenue is raised for the expenses of the government are wholly of Republican reation; and foremost among them is the much-lauded McKinley act. If one were to judge from the glib utterances of the Republican leaders and organs, one would suppose that the Democratic administration had during the six months it has been in power devised some new methods of raising revenue, and that it is the failure of these which threatens a deficit. But the fact is that we are still living, so far as revenue raising is concerned, under the Republican dispensation. The Democratic administration has not yet had time to make any change in that regard; and one of the remarkable features of the situation is that while the Republican critics of the administration are proclaiming the failure of existing legislation to provide reveaue for the country's needs they are declaring in the same breath that nothing must be done to change that legislation. At one moment they jeer the admistration because it cannot raise sufficient revenue in spite of the McKinley act, and Bold TRAIN ROBBERY .- One of the the extravagant pension appropriation; boldest and most terrifying train and at the next they are shouting "hands robberies that has ever occurred in this off," and declaring that the McKinley country was perpetrated on a Lake Shore act must not be touched, and that not train Tuesday night last at 11 o'clock. only the pension laws but the corrupt It is worthy of note that the Republisooner held up than the engineer was shot and badly wounded. The invocation was delivered by Cardinal Gibbons. Addresses of welorgans are during to-day in condemning come were made by Catholic and Protesthe Democratic administration for a ant clergy. > The Parliament of Religions. That the world moves, and is moving in new and amazing directions, is a fact brought to the attention every day; but never in a more inspiring way than it was yesterday in Chicago, at the open ing of the Parliament of Religions. This convocation is, all things considered, the most extraordinary incident of the World's Fair. Religion is the one thing that, above all others, should bring mankind together; but hitherto it has been the most potent and inexorable agency in separating them. Creeds have been the bloody barriers over which humanity has fought with a desperat antagonism. If, as Madame Roland said. erimes have been committed in the name of liberty, they are as nothing in number and horror to those perpetrated in the name of religion.

But yesterday witnessed the beginning of a new order of things. On the same platform sat the priests of Buddha with those of Christianity. How much it means for humanity in future we can only conjecture; but that the antipathics, the bitterness and bloodshed of the past shall be no more forever is assured. Cardinal Gibbons expressed the mean ing of this assemblage graphically when he said that though all did not agree in matters of faith, there was one platform on which all were united-it was charity, humanity and benevolence. Each man was his brother's keeper. If humanity had not learned that lesson, we should be still walking in darkness. From the Parliament of Religions encrmous good must flow. The religious lesson of the age is the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man, and the human race is daily penetrating its meaning. After nearly two thousand years the fact is established and universally conceded that converts to any belief can never be made by persecution, the sword and the fagot. If ever the dream of a union of all believers in God is to be realized, the pathway to lennial anniversary of the laying of the ignorance than is comprised in the fact it must be through charity and mutual toleration .- Balt.
