A Bear at Large.

A week or more since a bear escaped from Druid Hill Park, Baltimore, and for miles around the city people have been on the lookout for his bruinship, reports having come in that he had been seen, often two or three places at the same time. The latest report locates him in Carroll's big woods, on Doughoregan Manor, seven miles west of Ellicott City, where he was seen by the Messrs. Renchan Thursday evening. Some dogs owned by Messrs. Patrick and Edward Renehan were hunting in the woods, when, seeing the strange creature, started to run. The bear seeing the men beat a retreat. Dr. James E. Shreeve, of Ellicott City, who had been out driving in the neighborhood and brought the report to town, says the people are greatly excited over the presence of the bear and had determined on his capture. In the meantime mothers propose to keep their little children in the house for fear the bear might be hungry.

Prohibition Nominations. The Prohibitionists of Howard county met in convention at the Court House, in Ellicott City, on Thursday, and nominated the following ticket: House of Delegates - Benjamin Keyes, B. W Bowman. Sheriff-John W. Ward.

Commissioner—Covington B. Zepp. Register of Wills-John T. Layman. Surveyor-Beldon D. Patrick. Mr. John W. Ward was chosen chair man and Mr. B. F. Keyes secretery. Mr John W. Parker, chairman of the Second legislative district of Baltimore, repre sented State Organizer W. Frank Tucker and addressed the convention.

Drowned in a Mill Race.

of Mr. Sylvester Baldwin, residing at Doughoregan, Third district of this county, was drowned in the Carroll mill Mrs. R. T. Nichelle. m, at that place, Friday afternoon, of last week. The child had been missing Catonsville and are occupying their resfrom the house but a short time, and on search being made the body was found in the dam, about fifty paces from the dwelling. He had accidentally fallen down an embankment, along which he had been playing. The water at that point is about four feet deep. Mr. Bald-win has charge of the saw mill connected with the flour mill.

Singing Classes.

Prof. T. M. A. Sipe, will organize singing class at Woodstock on next Thursday evening Oct. 19th. at 7.30. The meeting will be in the public schoolhouse, and all those interested in singing are invited to be present. As there are guests of Mrs. A. II. Trucheart on Wed a number of young people in the neighborhood a large class is expected. Also on Monday next, Oct. 16th, at 7.30 the Professor will organize a class at Cross his studies at the University of Maryland and Snyder's hall, Montevue, where likewise those in the vicinity desiring to join are invited to come.

Charged With Stealing a Bicycle.

A colored youth named Louis Johnson who is charged with the theft of bicycle, valued at $125, belonging to Il H. Gitt, of Hanover, Pa., was arrested Friday afternoon of last week on the Frederick pike, thirty miles above Ellicott City, by Chief of Police James E Vansant, who lodged him in jail to await a requisition from Pennsylvania The bicycle, which had been sold for $15 to a Mr. Molesworth, at New Market, was recovered and also brought to Ellicott City.

W. C. T. U. Workers.

We are indebted to Mrs. Lucy Penn Mullinix for a copy of the proceedings of the W. C. T. U. Convention held a Annapolis during the last week in September. The convention was well attended and some stirring addresses made, notably that by Mrs. Mary B. Baxter, of Michigan. Much enthusiasm was manifested and the workers in the cause do not seem to be discouraged by any failures that may have been experi enced in giving prominence to the cause of temperance. Among those presen from Howard county we notice the names of Mrs. Thomas J. Hood and Mrs E. L. Tatum, both zealous workers.

Several important improvements have been added to the flour mill of the C. A Gambrill Mfg. Company at Orange Grove. A new Atlas engine has been put in which increases the capacity o the mill from 800 barrels per day to 1.200. The additional power also Rev. D. M. Browning. furnishes a hundred electric lights of sixteen candle power each inside the mill and twelve on the outside of thirtytwo candle power each, giving the place a very cheerful aspect at night.

A New Fence. There never was a time when cheap ness and durability entered more special ly into the thoughts of man, especially the American farmer, than at present A handsome, durable fence, one that will give picturesqueess to any farm at the smallest possible cost, will arrest the eye of any farmer who has a modicum of pride in his home or occupation. We believe that kind of fence has been invented and is here in Howard county with Mr. W. Fred Brown as agent. A advertisement of this fence can be seen in this issue of THE TIMES giving general idea as to its points of merit The makers offer $1000 reward for any fence embracing more desirable features Mr. Brown is now located in Ellicot City and will take picasure in showing the fence, a section of which can be seen

THE STATE OF MARYLAND.

BALTIMORE'S RAPID TRANSIT.—The expedition with which the old horse car lines in Baltimore have been changed into cable and trolley roads surprises everybody. It is yet only three years since work was begun on the first cable road and already twenty-one lines have been fitted out with rapid transit, and some of them are now routes which were not ever projected in 1890. No city on the continent will have so quickly made the change from the old-time tramway to the most approved mechanical and electrical traction.—Balt. Herald.

THE THIRTY-FIRST VICTIM.—Still another victim has been added to the list of unfortunates who have met death beneath the iron-wheels of fenderless, rapid transit cars in Baltimore. John Paulus, aged ten, was the latest and thirty-first victim. He was killed at having something to say and of quitting Charles and Clements streets, Monday | when he says it. evening.

FORD'S NEW GRAND OPERA HOUSE.

Week of October 16th, "Africa"-The The Latest Comic Opera Success, Harrison, Harry and Basil Owings, John enthusiasm prevails at every performance. The spectacle is really one of the most enjoyable of the kind ever seen in Baltimore. It partakes of all those was intensely in earnest, in a cold and tertainment so popular with the masses, while at the same time it resembles none of them. This originality is carried out in all portions of the presentation, making it a model as well as an ideal production. A great feature of N. Morison, who have been visiting the the entertainment is the taste displayed in the setting of the different scenes, these being made to appear doubly beautiful by their harmony with the costumes worn by the company. George Thatcher is seen to a better advantage as the King Orizaba than anything in which he has appeared in recent years. His comedy is clean and bright as of yore, and his sponteneity is Mathew Powers where several years ago the cause of his humor being changed he carried on blacksmithing. The old every night, as he does not have to study shop has been torn down and workmen In order to be funny. Otis Harlan, as the prime minister is also making the hit of his professional career, his work eclipsing all former efforts. John Colefrom Mt. Nebo on Saturday last to visit man is seen at his best as the explorer the part fitting him better than any in which he has appeared here. Raymon Moore and R. J. Jose have roles that are much more prominent than any in which we have seen them, and as both have added histrionic powers to their abilities, it is at once manifest that their performance is more enjoyable than ever. Their voices are as charming as of yore, this same being true of the singing of H. W. Frillman, basso, and Thomas Lewis, baritone. Charles Stine is winning golden opinions by his clever

SEN. ARTHUR P. GORMAN. HOW A DAY PASSES WITH MARY

LAND'S SENIOR SENATOR. Mr. Gorman Gets to the Capitol Before Department Clerks Are Out of Bed and Is Busy All Day-At Home He is the Most Companionable of Men-Takes Great Interest in His Farm-Neighbors Look Upon Him as an Authority.

Washington, Oct. 7 .-- Senator Gorman was born on a farm, and he has never lost his relish for the independent life of a farmer. His home place in situated five miles from Laurel, and there he still lingers, loth to exchange the quiet delights of the country for the conveniences and distractions of the city. Mrs. Gorman agrees with him in preferring the country to the town, and the home circle to all the gayeties of the most brilliant season at the Capital. As becomes a farmer, Senator Gorman is an early riser; 60'clock every morning sees him out of bed. He then goes out into the hallway and proceeds to call the roll of the children, of whom there are six, five girls, Misses Ada, Hattie, Mattie, Bessie Daisy, and one boy, Arthur P., Jr. Half an hour later he sits down to breakfast, surrounded by one of the happiest households in Maryland. After breakfasting a two-scated carriage, drawn by two first-class roadsters, is brought up to the door by the colored driver, and the Senator, accompanied usually by one or more of the family, enters the vohicle and is driven to the Baltimore and Ohio station in Laurel.

Half an hour is allowed for the trip. At 7.40 the train is due. It is the one that most of the department people and Washington business men living along ing papers of Baltimore and Washington, stopping to chat occasionally with a neighbor or friend.

On arriving in Washington he enters an F street car and rides up to H and Fifteenth streets, where he leaves the car and goes to the barber skop in Wormley's flotel and is shaved by his favorite tonsorial artist. That done he walks or rides to the Capitol, going at once to his committee rooms (he is chairman of the Committee on Printing) in the southeast corner of the second floor of the Senate wing. Here most of his mail now comes and with this he busics himself. His mail is always large and the services of a stenographer and typewriter are called into requisition to enable him to dispose of his correspondence in time to be present when the presiding officer of the Senate, gavel in hand, calls that body to order.

Such is the ordinary routine of the day up to the hour of assembling. It is varied at times by a meeting of the Committee on Printing or of one of the several other committees of which the Senator is a member, these being Appropriations, Commerce, Interstate Commerce, Pensions, Rules and Corporations in the District of Columbia. There are few committee meetings these days, how-in the chamber watches matters more going on. He never occupies the time of the Senate in mere speechmaking, but on the infrequent occasions when he addresses that body he is listened to intently by friend and foe, for they know he never speaks unless he has something to say. He not only holds the attention of his fellow-Senators and of the public gaileries, but what is a more difficult thing to do, he compels the attention of in any degree to the manner of the speaker, for Gorman is not an orator, as Voorhees is, adorning his speech with rhetoric and gorgeous imagery. He does not possess the fire and passion of Wolcott, the cold, frosty logic of John Sherman, nor the wealth of illustration with which Vest adorns his oratorical efforts. Gorman, like Marc Antony, is a plain, blunt man, who speaks right on. At all times he speaks easily, though deliberately, never at a loss for the right with Wolcott rises to positive elequence. He compels attention when he speaks by the very simple yet difficult means of

No Senator is more sought after by those wanting favors or legislation than Gorman. He has been generally recognized as the Democratic leader in the of the points of attraction, and they invariably ask to have him pointed out. Senator Gorman's greatest parliamentary triumph was the shelving of the Force bill. It was something of a surprise to the country when it was learned that he had been selected for the onerous "Africa" is evidently to the liking of task of leading his party in this appelocal theatregoers, for the utmost rently hopeless battle, but the result justified the choice. For a measure. He left no plan untried, no man supposed to be weighted down with ambition untouched, no interest untempted in his cold-blooded zeal to secure its enactment It was conceded that should the bill reach a vote it would pass. Mr. Gorman's efforts, therefore, were aimed at the prevention of a vote. He prevented it, and finally, by the aid of Teller and Wolcott, side-tracked it, and that killed it. In the long struggle Mr. Gorman showed great tact, courtesy and good nature. He was then, as always, quiet in his manner, unhurried in his movements. unostentatious in his bearing. He continued cool, calm and collected in the most exciting phases of the contest. He was ever on the alert, quick to see and seize every advantage, however slight, which presented itself. During those trying days nothing ever rufiled his temper, no assault, however sudden, found him with broken lines, no change of tactics, however unexpected, discovered him unprepared.

In his celebrated memorial address on the life and character of James Abram Garfield, delivered before both Houses of Congress in Washington, on Febru ary 27, 1882, the late James G. Blaine, himself a parliamentarian of high rank thus described the qualities necessary to such leadership: "A parliamentary leader, as that term understood wherever free representative government exists, is necessarily and very strictly the organ of his party. No more important or exacting duty devolves upon him than the selection of the field and the time for contest. He rise above a certain height, leaving the decided hit in the prima donna role. must know, not merely how to strike, water too shallow for boating purposes. but where to strike and when to strike. He often skillfully avoids the strength of his opponent's position and scatters confusion, in his ranks by attacking an exposed point, when really the rightcousness of the cause and the strength of logicial intrenchment are against him. He conquers often both against the right and the heavy battalions." Mr. Gorman conquered with the right

The result was so satisfactory that the new owner entered him in a trotting match of the 2.50 class. It was the best three heats out of five. The horse lost the first two and took the last three and the race, trotting the last heat in 2.32. Since the present owner has had the horse he has won over $900 for himself in trotting matches. He says he would not take $1500 for him. The Senator, or rather his son, Arthur P., ir. has for some time wanted a fast horse. It is looked upon in the family as a good deal of a joke that he had one and didn't know it.

Senator Gorman is now casting about for a house in town for the winter. Mrs. Gorman would prefer to live on the farm all the year, but yields to the necessities of the Senator's public duties and the desires of the children to be in Senate ever since the memorable fight | the city during the season. His route to and from the Capi tol included Fourteenth street and Pensylvania avenue. When living on the farm he rents a room in one of the residences facing Capitol Park, which, when detained in the city too late to go home he uses as a sleeping apartment. He keeps here a supply of clothing for exigencies, for the Senator is one of the well-dressed men of the Senate. Senator Gorman is one of the most approachable men in public life. He with perfect courtesy, listens patiently party secrets and deep parliamentary plans, and so assailed with queries from ill sorts of men who want inside infor-

He has all important papers and documents relating to his private and to the public business filed in such a way that he can lay his fingers on them at a minute's notice. In the fire that destroyed his house about two years ago he lost his library. It was a valuable collection of books, magazines and periodicals. Among the latter was a complete file of the Baltimore Sun from its first issue. Perhaps the work the loss of which he most regretted was a scrap book containing pretty much everything that had been published about him up to that time. This and his newspaper files can hardly be replaced. After this disaster he built his present residence, a large two-story frame and mansard roof building with a broad veranda.

When at home Senator Gorman is consulted as freely by the farmers round about as to crops, stock, planting, drainage, the market, the improvement of the roads, and the like, as he is about politics when in Washington or New York. He is an oracle among his former neighbors as well as among his political associates. On the grounds about his house is a miniature lake. For a long time it &c. was impossible to fill it.
