TARIFF FOR REVENUE ONLY. Our esteemed contemporary, the Indianapolis Journal, represents as follows what it conceives to have been the situation after the election of 1892: "Democrats said: 'We are pledged to free trade. The people want it, and we will give it to them.' Republicans said: The Democratic party has carried the country on an out and out free trade platform. The people have declared in favor of it, so let them have it. Let them try it, and if it is really better for the country than protection, let us all agree to support it." This seems very queer. How could the Democracy say that they were pledged to free trade by the Chicago platform when there is not a word or intimation respecting free trade in that instrument, and when the platform expressly declares for a tariff for revenue only, which is something entirely opposed to free trade? And how could the Republicans say that the Democrats had carried the country on an out-and out free trade platform, when the truth is that they had carried it on a revenue tariff platform? It is very curious how the minds of intelligent politicians, and the writers of able and high-toned journals, appear to simple question.- N. Y. Sun. The above is a clear statement of fact respecting the position of the Democratic party on the tariff question. High tariffs since the war have been laid for the primal reason that the government needed the revenue. Protection in the eyes of all good statesmen was a secondmatter—by some Republican states men (Garfield for instance)-not to be considered at all. The utterance of the Chicago platform was to the effect that at this time a tariff was necessary, but for revenue only. The Democracy is is favor of tariff reform. If in the natural course of things reform ultimately leads to free trade, well and good. Taxation is unnatural, artificial and sometimes oppressive. Protection is an insidious mode of taxation, enriching the few and weakening the masses. A few years of the McKinley bill and we would have a state of things not unlike England in her feudal days when the barons and middle classes fared badly. They were not "in it" so to speak. In the days of slavery the south pre sented this very condition, and is suffering from it yet. The slaveholder was rich and all-powerful The white man without slaves was in a great measure socially and politically ostracized, certainly neglected, and as a consequence dense illiteracy is yet to be found from the northern parts of the Virginias to the gulf coast among a class as intellectually bright naturally as is to be found in the world, generally descendants of the Scotch and Irish. Their number is that news is scarce at Washington. estimated at five millions and their crying needs have called forth missionary effort in their behalf from nearly all the churches. They have always been known their followers ruled the country. The

as the "poor whites." It can easily be observed that their condition is the result of a system which had no use for them. The slaveholder practically owned the land and his chief aim was to develop wealth by the labor based on the protection idea. It assisted largely in creating the seven thousand millionaires in this country and it is easily to see that much more of it would enable a class to absorb all the property worth anything and the great midle class must ultimately become dependents, losing position socially and politically. Politically, because the protected class would ever be supplied with the means of workmen, while during the year they might squabble with their employers about wages, at the elections would be found voting with them as they evidently did on the 7th of November in Ohio, because they were falsely told that the operation of Democratic policy meant death to the manufacturing interests.

The question of tariff will no more down than the ghost of Banquo would not because it has been demonstrated that its! operation is a constant menace to general prosperity and as each year rolls around its evil effects are more easily discerned. The people saw it in 1890 and largely changed the complexion of the House. They saw it plainer in 1892 and swept the country. Notwithstanding the phenomenal majorities of the Republicans on the 7th inst., it is not to be supposed that the people at large have changed their minds, certainly not the great thinking class, who, in 1892, weighed the arguments of the two parties and concluded that the Democratic idea was correct and voted that way. How little things grow into big ones is shown by the estimate of officials connected with the department of Agriculture, that the growth of Russian thistle, a pesky little weed, has this year caused a loss of not less than $4,000,000 to the farmers of the United States.

The Honduras government is very vasteful. According to its statement, the shots fired across the bow of a vessel flying the American flag were a salute in ionor of the American minister who happened to be on the vessel. The sound common sense of the American people will not support the proposition, unblushingly made in some quarters, that it is obligatory upon the present administration to condone or gnore wrongs done by the Harrison crowd. It can never be wrong to right a wrong, particularly when it was done to those unable to help themselves.

President Cleveland used common sense and justice, rather than sentiment, in settling that Hawaffan business, and, as might have been expected, the settlement is not pleasing to those who always take thesentimental view of things, regardless of facts. There is one characteristic of President Cleveland that even his bitterest political enemies admire—he alway prefors to do what he believes to be right rather than what he knows would be popular, although wrong. The recommendation of General Superintendent White of the Railway Mail Service that the wives or children of clerks in that service who are killed in the line of duty be paid $1,000 is a good one and should be adopted by Congress.

Some people seem to have an idea that because a thing is startling it must necessarily be wrong, although history and and experience teach the contrary.

contribution to the industrial statistics of the country in his published report on the wages of farm labor in the United States. His trbles show that in 1866 monthly farm wages, exclusive of board, were as follows: In eastern states, $33 31; middle states, $29 83; southern states, $16 63; western states, $25.84; mountain states, $27.23; Pacific states $43 60, the average being $26.67. The lowest point was reached in 1879, when the average was $16 05. THE INCOME TAX SCHEME. It is popularly supposed that the purooses of the Cleveland Administration regarding tariff reform include the adoption of an income tax. Consequently, the announcement from Washington that the scheme of a tax on incomes is with great interest.

One of the first statements made that incomes of $2,500 or less are to be exempt brings a sigh of relief to untold thousands of the people. Happily, the majority are struggling along with a salary or income below that figure. As a consequence, the income tax plan will receive less opposition than a graded tax William Dudley Foulke, one of the arrangement would, taking in incomes of

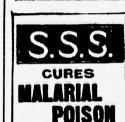

As a means of raising public revenue an income tax has been frequently tried ong enough to make a speech before the by various nations of the world. It is no new thing, except in the United States. Whether it will meet the expectations of the financiers in Washington and prove acceptable to the people are matters to be settled by experiment. The measure out-lined in Washington is in the nature of a tax on well to do and wealthy men, and if successful will draw from American millionaires and rich corporations a considerable portion of the public revenue. Its utility must be made a matter of practical test, after it ceases to be a theory and a proposed piece of legislation. -Baltimore Herald.
