THE PRESIDENT AND THE SENATE. The United States Senate last week rejected the appointment of Wheeler II. Peekham, of New York, as judge of the United States Supreme Court. Mr. Peckham's fate was that of Wm. B. Hornblower, rejected in January.

The constitution provides that all federal appointments made by the President shall be with the advice and consent of the Senate. In conformity with this constitutional provision, executives have advised and consulted with Senators representing the States from which appointments were to be made, and the Senate itself has deferred to the wishes of individual members in such cases. This is the much talked-of "senatorial courtesy," against which there has been recent declamation, but which really rests upon a foundation as solid as the constitution.

In the cases of Hornblower and Peckham it seems that the Senators from New York had not been consulted and had, in fact been snubbed by the President. This was because of local political differences, President Cleveland being allied with one faction of New York State politics, and Senators Hill and Murphy with another. The Senate's disapproval of the President's course in the first instance was shown by a rejection of Hornblower by a vote of 39 to 26. Peckham's rejection was by a vote betterment of the whole people. of 41 to 32. The Maryland Senators in The workingmen have failed to see both instances voted against encroach- that the wealth of the country has been ment upon the constitutional preroga- flowing into the coffers of the few and tives of the upper house of Congress. The vote in detail on the Peekham appointment was: For confirmation-Democrats, 23; Republican, 8; Populist 1; total 52. Against-Democrats, 15 Republicans, 24, Populists, 2; total, 41. The Senate is doubtless considerably annoyed that a local political fight has been lugged into its deliberations, and this has possibly influenced votes although in opposite ways. Some Senators who might have, in the of harmony, submitted to infringment upon their rights felt bound it is thought to rebuke the President for starting a party dis turbance by nominating a man known to be offensive to the New York delegation. Others, though disapproving the the House. President's course, yet to patch up difficulties at any cost and stop the fight if possible, voted for confirmation. The outcome of the whole affair has been a triumph especially for Senator Hill, of New York. Whether the President will continue the fight or not remains to be seen. Should he do so. Senator Hill, having established the principle for which he contended, may now magnamimously see fit to let the

LIPPINCOTT'S MAGAZINE for March.-The complete novel in the March number of Lippincott's is "A Desert Claim," by Mary E. Stickney. It is a charming tale of ranch life in Northern Colorado, Gilbert Parker's serial, "The Trespasser," reaches it ninth chapter. "The nmate of the Dungeon," by W. C. Morrow, is a story of uncommon power. Joel Chandler Harris, in "The Late Mr. Watkins of Georgia; His Relation to M'Ulure's Magazine for March. A more notable magazine in the names of its contributors than the March Mc Clure's has rarely come from the press Kipling, Herbert Spencer, Robert Louis Stevenson, Conan Doyle, and Octave Thanet certainly make a list that it is hard to equal. And, what is more to the point, the contributions are quite as distinguished as the contributors. The short story by Mr. Kipling, is one of his best; the short story by Octave Thanet is one of her best. Conan Doyle's contribution, "The Glamour of the Arctic." is not a story, but it has more than the interest of one, for it is an account of Arctic whaling, written with Dr. Doyle's best grace, from his own personal experience. Of the Stevenson Osbourne serial, "The Ebb Tide," since it opened in no wise uneventfully in the February number, it is much to say that it grows in interest as it progresses, but that is strictly true, and the present installment is most absorbing. Herbert Spencer writes of his intimate friend of forty years, the late Professor Tyndall. The subjects of the "Human Documents" portraits are Andrew Lang, J. T. Trowbridge, and Renan.

PENNSYLVANIA'S DEVOTION TO MC

KINLEYISM. The Republicans of Pennsylvania nade a clean sweep Tuesday, electing Galusha A. Grow over James D. Hancock for Congressman-at-large, by a majority of 150,000. This is the largest majority ever reached by the Republicans in the State. As the question of tariff clearly entered into the contest there is but one conclusion to arrive at, and that is, Pennsylvania is desirous of restoring McKinleyism. Pennsylvania s a great manufacturing State and it is evident the voters acted without reason. In other words they held the Democratic party responsible for what should be clear to their minds is the result of Republican policy.

quality of the average mind in a condition of desperation, as is the condition of multitudes of the workingmen at this time. Disappointed that a change of administration did not bring with it immediate prosperity they are deliberately willing to again place the yoke of Me-Kinleyism on their necks until again to the fact at time of paying subscripdriven to desperation they would reverse | tion. their decision of Tuesday. Fortunate it is that Mr. Cleveland has three years more of administration and that the Wilson bill will become a law. Fortunate it is that tariff revision has been in the hands of wise and careful statesmen, men who have individually sunk personal advantage to give the country the best possible compromise between contending interests, and have placed before the country a measure which they believe will do the greatest good to the Pennsylvania is a baron-ridden State and the monopolists of that commonwealth have left nothing undone to rebake the administration, and the present prostration of business has given them opportunity to work on the prejudices and necessities of the myraid of workingmen who crowd her cities and coal regions. The false glamor of Protectionism is still to a large majority of the workingmen a beacon light which they hope will lead them into a haven of prosperity. It is impossible for many of them to reason on principles of political economy. They are governed by present necessities and their crying needs comne's them to seize upon what appears best and most easily attained. They have failed to see that all of Mr. Cleveland's acts and utterances have been for the necessity grow weaker and weaker until wealth will have possession of the country,-until nothing short of a revolution will win back the days of yore when every farmer was well-to-do, and when the country was not the prey of the rich as it is now, or if not now, is fast getting Pennsylvania's heavy Republican majority will accomplish nothing in the resent situation and will not affect in the least the present bearing of Democratic policy upon the country.

Justice of the Income Tax. Congressman McMillin in a recent speech gave the following explanation of the income tax which was passed by

"If a man owns $50,000,000 or $100,000, 000 worth of property in the United States as some do, he pays only on what he eats. what he drinks, what he wears and the other things he uses. The time has come when this should be changed. I ask of any reasonable person whether it is unjust to expect that a small percentage of this enormous revenue shall be placed upon the accumulated wealth of the country instead of placing it upon the consumption of the country. Is it not time that great estates which are proected by our Army, which are defended by our Navy, which are benefited by the various operations of Government, should contribute in some greater degree to carry on that Government through which alone they could have been accumulated or by which they are protected? The people of the United States do not ask that all of it shall be placed on accumulated wealth. But they do insist that it is not unreasonable or unjust to require that a very small proportion of it

"It has been the effort of the Ways and Means Committee to so construct the bill as to leave it as free as possible from criticism. Unlike the old law, it loes not require a schedule from every citizen. Only those who have $4000 income have to make a return. There is nothing in this against which any man can complain. There is nothing to arouse tear that any ill can come from it. It is no tax on bread. It is no embargo placed upon prosperity. It is no effort to prevent prosperity. It is not a deathblow aimed at commerce. But it is an effort to in some way, require each citizen to contribute to the Government in proportion to what he has. It should be the duty and pleasure of every American citizen to see that each other citizen Oriental Folk-Lore," compares a curious has equal and exact justice administered legend of his own State with one of to him under the law and that wealth, not poverty, should be taxed."

The advocates of a high tariff tell us that what is most necessary for American manufactures is to secure the home market for them against foreign competition, and that if only we can prevent the importation of foreign goods, the domestic demand will alone secure the prosperity of our own industries. Well, we have about stopped importations now. The imports for January were scarcely more than half those of January a year ago, and the falling off of customs receipts in the past year is one of the causes of the scarcity of funds in the Treasury. From the high tariff point of view this should be regardinflux of cheap foreign goods that has disturbed our manufactures. The home market meanwhile is nearly empty and the factories are everywhere Republican policy.

Such is the fickleness and unreasoning starting up to supply it. Why, then, all this outery against the Wilson bill? If it is a desirable thing to discourage importations, the present situation should be hailed as a triumph, not bewailed as a calamity.—Phila. Times. A Ladies' Journal Free. Every subscriber paying his or her subscription to THE TIMES in advance will receive "Womankind," a lady's Journal published monthly. Persons desiring the paper should call attention
