AN EFFECTIVE MADSTONE. How It Adheres to the Body and Sucks

Out All the Polson Nearly every one has heard more or ess about madstones and the wonderful cures with which they are credited in saving life where a person had been bitfen by a mad dog. Many regard these stones as a mere superstition, but statis-tics go to prove that they really do contain many wonderful properties. Madstones are seldom heard of anywhere except in the southern states, where they are quite common, and most of the people of that section place great faith in them. Mrs. J. M. Parks, a lady residing in this city, is the possessor of one

"Yes," she said when questioned on the subject, "I have a madstone and have had it many years. My husband found it near Magnesia Springs, Fla. I have only had occasion to use it three or four times since it has been in my possession, and each time the best results followed. The reason that I have not used it often is that I never hear of a case where a person has been bitten by a mad dog until I see it in the paper, and then it has always been stated that the patient has been taken with convulsions. It is too late to use the madstone then. Spasms do not generally appear until about nine days after the person is bitten, and if the stone is applied any time previous to the convulsions the poison will be entirely drawn out by it. "The worst case I ever cured with my madstone happened when a policeman here in the city, named Price, was bitten on the hand by a mad dog. His arm had swollen up to three or four times its natural size and had turned black. The man was suffering the most excruciating agony, and his physicians had despaired of his life. I accidentally heard of his case and at once hurried to the house with my madstone. The doctor consented to give it a trial, and the result was that the man recovered and is now walking around the streets as well

Upon the reporter's asking if he might see the stone Mrs. Parks immediately produced it, remarking as she did so, 'It does not look nearly as powerful as it really is." It is a little, porous, chalklike substance about an inch long, half an inch wide and a quarter of an inch thick the flesh, sucking out the poison until ali the pores of the stone are filled with the deadly virus. The stone then drops off of its own accord, and after being thoroughly cleansed with milk, warm water and soap is applied again. This is kept up till the stone refuses to stick, thereby

The Sting of the Nettle. The leaf and stem of a nettle are literally clothed with erect hollow hairs. If one of these hairs is viewed under: microscope, it will be seen that its free end, after tapering to a very fine degree of slimness, finishes as a little knob, while in the other direction, after gradually becoming more robust, it suddenly expands into a large bulb, corresponding with the poison gland of the adder. The point of the hair is very brittle, they are too stout to prick .- Good

Jewelry In a Grave.

The largest amount of jewelry known to be in a single grave was buried in Greenwood cemetery several years ago. The undertaker who had charge of the funeral protested against it, but was severely snubbed for his interference. The family had its way and in that grave is buried fully $5,000 worth of diamonds, with which the body was decked when prepared for burial. Sometimes families who desire to bury their dead in the clothing worn in life-in evening or wedding dresses, for instance—substitute less costly imitations for the jewelry worn in life, partly from motives of thrift and partly from a superstitious fear that anything taken off a body when it is ready for the tomb will bring ill luck to future wearers.—
