It is a fact well known to every hotel

Pressure Sustained by Divers.

Have you any idea of the enormous pressure sustained by submarine divers while plying their dangerous vocations

We will take 100 feet as the average dep that which such tradesmen work and use that as a basis of calculation. At depth of 100 feet, which does not seem there are spots in the oceans which ar approximately five miles deep, the pres sure on the diver's body is 44 pounds for each square inch of surface. Let u see what this means. The average man of 156 pounds has a body of sufficient proportions to present 12 square feet of surface to the pressure of the waters.

This means that the ordinary diver must work in a place where his body is subjected to a pressure of 38 tons. Nor is this all. For every 271/4 inches of depth descended below the 100 foot line which we have adopted as a basis of calculation there must be added one pound pressure to each square inch of the diver's bedily surface. Persons who think that divers regularly descend to the bottom of the oceans in the deepest places will probably be surprised to learn that the greatest depth to which man has as yet attained is only 210 feet.-St. Louis
