ON MOUNTAIN TOP.

GRAPHIC DESCRIPTION OF THE VIEW FROM LONG'S PEAK.

A Landscape No Painter Can Put Upon Canvas, No Words Fully Express-Trembling With Year at the Stupendous Scene-Anna Dickinson's Card.

All lovers of mountain scenery having a few days' time at their disposal must make a flying trip to Estes park, he most beautiful and inviting of all Colorado parks, but not the largest. It s only six miles wide by ten miles long, brough which run several streams, filled with "speckled beauties," so much sought for by skilled anglers. At the outh end of the park rises Long's peak in all its majesty and grandeur, with a entinel on either side nearly equal its height. The altitude of the park is

7,500 feet. We leave our wheels at the hotel and drive up to Lamb's ranch, where we spend the night at an elevation of 10,-

000 feet. At sunrise the next morning, mounted on horseback, with an experienced guide in the lead, we ride up to timber line, where we picket our horses and commence the climb of the bowlder fields, necessitating much courage and determination, as these bowlders are angular rocks of solid granite and run in size from a chicken coop to a modern dwelling. In the center of this bowlder field was passed the slab recording the death of Carrie Welton of Connecticut, who a few years since unwisely insisted upon the guide accompanying her to the peak too late in the season. When returning, they were caught in a severe gale and blinding storm. After suffering as only one can suffer when surrounded by that intense loneliness, stung by the pangs of cold and cravings of hunger, her life was sacrificed. The trusty guide for hours made supernatural efforts to carry her over those almost impassable rocks until, at her request, he left her to bring a rescuing party from the ranch, which upon arrival found life extinct. Following the guide, we pass through an opening called the "keyhole" and emerge beside an unwelcome precipice. We carefully pick our way along the brink, which requires all our nerve and resolution, but yet is not as tiresome as the loose sand and broken rock, rising at an incline of 45 degrees, just beyond. By perseverance and an occasional rest we are enabled to reach that ugly precipice on our right, and by using both hands and feet we make the summit, where we stand speechless with wonder and admiration. Hard as it was, we would make the same heroic effort a hundred times were it necessary to witness the grand scene before us.

Nearly 8,000 feet below is Estes park, the sportsman's paradise; to the west is Middle park and Hot Sulphur Springs; to the south South park. Beyond these peaks we see the range for a distance of asses we discern Gray's peak, Mount Lincoln, Mount Evans, Pike's peak and Old Ouray in Marshall pass, some of which are 200 miles distant. What a scene it is! What an ocean of mountain billows, in constrast to which we turn to the east and see an ocean of plainsthe one as quiet as the peaceful sea in a calm, the other as tempestuous as the forests and crystal streams. Again and again we sweep the hori zon and study a landscape no painter can paint, no speech can express. Before returning we must look at the souvenir deposits of visitors. Here is a shingle by Major Powell, who, with William N Byres, was the first to make the ascent in 1868. Here is Anna Dickinson's card, the first woman to ascend the peak, also of the party who climbed the peak in 1878 to witness the total eclipse, together with thousands of visitors' cards. The top of the peak is level, covering a few acres, and we wonder that a house has not been built there for the accommodation of those who might wish to remain overnight and see the sun rise. Before returning we must take one look over the crater wall, which has a perpendicular descent of 3,000 feet. How nervously we approach the edge, step by step, until our strength fails us and we can go no farther.

Never was time more valuable than now. So much to be seen. Such a picture to paint in our minds so that it may never fade. Think of making this impression indelibly upon one's mind, covering this panoramic view of 200 miles in either direction of plains, valleys, parks and mountains, of growing fields of wheat and far distant cities, of snow capped mountains, of magnificent Is authorized to become sole surety of bonds of executors, administrators, guardians assignees, receivers, trustees, &c., and in case of attachment, replevin, appeal, etc.

Trembling with fear, we return from this stupendous scene, bewildered with mixed feelings of pleasure and fear. Before making the descent we take a final view, the like of which we shall never again see. We retrace our steps, and having passed the most dangerou places courage is restored, and we reach the park after nightfall so tired and with such a longing for our couch, but with the feeling that we would sacrifice anything reasonable rather than deny ourselves to Long's peak, but having once made it nothing would tempt us to climb it again .- Edward B. Light in Good Roads.

There was a dispute as to the claim, he said, but he admitted that he had put his name to the note that we had sued on. He could not pay that afternoon anyway, and the deputy wanted to take the horse right away. Stories of Wonderful Skill With Bow and Arrow. The expression "drawing a long bow" does not of necessity mean the telling of a falsehood. The Rock Island Hay Loader proved to be a very happy as well as profitable investment for me, as I never before made hay with as little expense or labor. I would not think of doing without one. I loaded twelve large loads of hay in four hours, and could have loaded more if I could have unloaded it faster at the barns.

1. A. BRICKER. ALBERTON, MD., Oct. 21, 1893. In reply to your inquiry as to how I am pleased with the "Rock Island" Hay Loader I bought of you? It is perfectly satisfactory in every respect and does all you claimed for it; in fact I am so well pleased with it that $200 dollars would not buy it if I could not get another.

The Rock Island Hay Loader makes 1,700 Strokes per mile, other loaders make 4,500, and the wear to the machine and damage to the hay is just in proportion, as compared with the relative speed.

These stories began long ago. Virgil, in the "Æncid," tells of four archers mast of a ship. The first man hit the mast, the second cut the cord, and the third shot the pigeon as it flew away. The fourth archer, having nothing left to shoot, drew his bow and sent his arrow flying toward the sky with such speed that the friction of the air set the feathers on fire, and it swept on, like a to have a foundation of fact. There was a Dane named Foke of whom the same story is told, and William of Cloudesley, an Englishman, is said to have shot an apple from his son's head merely to show his expertness. Most stories of bows and arrows relate to the accurate aim of the archers, but a Frenchman, Blaise de Vigenere, tells one that shows the tremendous force with which an arrow may be pro-who were loitering on a corner, for there was an immediate cherus of 'Chinamen cat rats' as the men approached. The Chinamen took no notice of the juveniles, who followed in their rear, continuing their shouting. Farther up the street a youth was standing on the sidewalk, and as the Chinamen passed him he, evidently inspired by the boys, asked them what shirts were being washed at. He apparently thought the Chinamen didn't know a word of English. You can imagine his discomfiture then alive by the religious customs of the Hindoos, who are not allowed to use wooden and earthenware vessels freely, and brass and bronze are to them as important as glass and china to the westerners. Almost all Hindoo utensils are of brass, copper or bronze, and it is the custom to present the female portion of a Hindoo family with a valuable batterie de cuisine, made either of brass or copper, and a still existing Hindoo ceremony is that of carrying the utensils in a procession at the wedding. The result of this custom is that almost all the platters, trays, bowls, nut crackers and all brass and copper utensils are most beautifully ornamented, and there are lovely combinations of brass and copper and silver and copper. All Hindoo women used to have lovely brass caskets covered with ornamentations called chellams, manufactured in Malabar, in which they kept their jewels, but these are fast being replaced by the vulgar English japanned dispatch box.
