JAPAN AND CHINA.

The situation of China is occupying the attention of the civilized world. The Japanese are steadily working toward Pekin, the capital, and the Chinese are beseeching the powers to stop the war before the empire goes to pieces. The powers so far have given China to understand that Japan has a word to say in the matter, but Chinese pride thus far has prevented the humbling of herself before her ancient enemy. The situation is a most striking turn of affairs in the Orient.

Heretofore China has looked with contempt upon what she supposed was her weak neighbor, Japan. China has a population estimated at 400,000,000 with a territory approaching that of the United States in extent, excluding Alaska. Her system of government has stood for ages, but her social condition has been characterized by religious bigotry, intolerance and tyranny. Her under officials are the most corrupt and faithless in the world, deceiving the government and oppressing the people. As a consequence as the Japanese armies advance they are received with open arms by the people as affording at least a temporary relief from the grinding oppression of their rulers. As far as inherent strength is concerned China has proved an egg-shell, and the Japanese march in many instances has been more of the nature of a picnic than anything else. The possible outcome of all this is what is exciting the attention of the civilized world. Such is the spirit of modern progress that the walls of Chinese seclusion must inevitably break down before the outside pressure of a more intelligent and rational civilization. It is doubtless true that the brain and worth of the nation, seeing this, cannot give their country hearty support and would gladly see a disintegration of the empire if it brought with it modern ideas, tolerance, and true progress. The religious world also would see in a change like this a great opportunity to win China from her idols and the gloom of a moral darkness and superstition which has beclouded her people from time immemorial.

Her mines and other material resources have never been developed. Vast sections of her domain might be profitably utilized to the good and comfort of her teeming population. Her coal mines, with one or two exceptions, worked by Europeans, are untouched and her people are without adequate fuel. Japan, on the other hand, is developing all her resources and with wonderful sagacity and foresight has caught on to the best ideas of western civilization and is fast cleaving her way to the rank of a first class power. Such is the status of the two nations.

Now that the tariff question is practically settled for several years to come the administration is turning its attention to the finances of the country, more particularly the banking system—a system, doubtless, intended to take the place of the national banks, which, as most men agree, will not be the system of the future.

That the administration in considering the question will be confronted by intricate problems, far-reaching in their bearing upon business and the people at large, is no doubt seriously recognized by the administration or any one who has endeavored to point out the way leading to a satisfactory adjustment of our general system such as is needed in a country like ours with its ever varying necessities and diverse interests.

Gov. Brown's friends say that it is not likely he will re-enter the race for governor. He is showing entire indifference to his candidacy and is strictly attending to business. In discussing the situation a close business friend of the Governor said: "Since the announcement of his candidacy was made the conditions have changed and it need be no surprise if Governor Brown should refuse to enter a contest which from present indications looks as if it would develop into a free-for-all race and an unseemly and undignified scramble before the convention." If this is the conclusion of the Governor the way is wide open for Hon. Isidor Rayner whose popularity cannot be questioned.

Governor Brown has appointed Col. John C. Legg to the position of police commissioner of Baltimore, made vacant by the death of John Q. A. Robson. The appointment continues in force until the meeting of the legislature, in January 1896. The salary is $2,500.

The great Republican victory is undoubtedly being followed by a general revival of business in all parts of the country.—Baltimore American.

Out with such stuff! Tell the facts in the case. Business began to revive before the election under the benign influence of a Democratic tariff law.

If the Baltimore News gets Baltimore City and the State in proper shape it will have no more worlds to conquer.

Coxey was snowed under as Congressional candidate in the late election; but he serves notice that he will make another advance on Washington sometime during the future. It would, therefore, be well for that city to have a sufficient number of the "keep of the grass" signs on hand.—Exchange.

Maybe it had been better to elect Coxey to Congress. It was the districts around Washington that suffered most from his other raid.

PRESS OPINIONS.

Not a Rosy Outlook.

Baltimore Sun.

If we estimate the crop of wheat in the United States at five hundred million bushels, and that it takes fifty cents a bushel to pay expenses, then since the McKinley bill went into effect, four years ago, the farmers have $250,000,000 a year less with which to buy of the manufacturers. One year ago cotton was worth 8¼ cents a pound. Now it is worth 5 cents. Accepting the estimate of nine million bales for the crop of the present year, this means that the revenues of the cotton States will be diminished by $146,000,000 on a single staple. The average price of cotton for the decade ended with 1877 was about 18 cents; for that ended with 1887 it was 12 cents, and from 1884 to 1893 it was over 10 cents. It will be seen, therefore, how enormously the purchasing power of the cotton States has decreased, each cent a pound amounting to $45,000,000 on a single crop. But the decrease of revenue is more than it apparently is. If what remains is only sufficient to pay the expense of producing the crop, and it is probably not even sufficient for that, then the entire fund from this source available for buying supplies from the factories is gone.

And it is not the manufacturers alone upon whom this blow will fall. The Western farmers will suffer as well When better prices for cotton prevailed the South devoted its entire energies to its production, buying its meat, corn, hay and mules from the West. This the South can no longer do, but must raise these articles for itself or go without. The result of this necessity is already apparent in the increased production of corn and meat in the South and the increased distress of the Western farmer.

The effect of the low price of wheat and cotton upon what is called the balance of trade must be great, and it will account in a measure for the greater outflow of gold from this country to Europe during the last year or two. The average annual export of wheat from the United States is not far from a hundred and fifty million bushels, and of cotton this year will reach seventeen hundred million pounds. Instead of bringing back from Europe $320,009,000 as it did when wheat was a dollar and cotton ten cents, America will receive only $140,000,000. This means that that difference must be made up in some other way, and it is partly done by shipping gold.

The outlook for the farmer seems gloomy enough, but to us not so dark as that of the factory operative and others dependent on the manufacturing interests. The farmer, if he is out of debt, can get along. He has a roof over his head and no monthly rent to pay. He can raise on his farm sufficient food for his family and will find not much difficulty about his clothes. But if the factories go into overproduction and have to close for half the year, how are the inhabitants of the factory towns going to pay rent and buy food? That is a question worth considering.

Better Pay for Teachers.

Baltimore Herald.

Female teachers in the public schools of Philadelphia are demanding better wages. One argument advanced before the school board is that men occupying positions in the same grades and doing the same work receive better pay. It is also maintained that teaching being a profession which requires special aptitude and preparation should command salaries commensurate with the dignity of the position and the effort required to attain proficiency and excellence therein.

This is, by no means, a complaint confined to the City of Philadelphia Teaching was one of the first vocations for women to enter, and it is especially suited to their tastes and capacities. But women in general have never received pay equivalent to that given to men in the same grade of work. The rule which has applied elsewhere still clings to the schedule of teachers' salaries, and the pay given to women is 5 to 10 per cent. less than that allowed men.

The injustice of such procedure is apparent, and has been commented upon often. But the reasons which prompt school boards to cling to an old prejudice are so deep-seated that many have given up the hope of ever seeing them eradicated. It is part and parcel of that tradition which has designated woman as inferior to man, and which has made the entrance of the sex into self-supporting vocations very difficult.

But the question of teachers' salaries has a broader application than that contemplated in the Philadelphia agitation. Teachers are underpaid almost everywhere. In the Maryland counties the average salary is less than $203 per year, and in Baltimore it is less than $609. This, for special work, requiring not only a long period of previous training, but the exercise of great energy and self-reliance, is not enough. The salaries of teachers—particularly those in the lower grades—ought to be increased everywhere, and the step must finally be taken, or the value of public instruction will certainly deteriorate.

Does This go with Czar Reed?

Baltimore Sun.

Governor Brown has issued his proclamation declaring the election of Congressmen in the six Maryland districts. The proclamation says that W. Laird Henry and Charles E. Coffin were elected to represent the first and fifth districts, respectively, in the Fifty third Congress, and that Joshua W. Miles, Wm. B. Baker, Harry Welles Rusk, John K. Cowen, Charles E. Coffin and George L. Wellington were elected to represent, respectively, the first, second, third, fourth, fifth and sixth districts in the Fifty-fourth Congress.

The Execution in Spain.

Baltimore American.

If ever a villain deserved to be executed, that person was Jose Salvador Franch, who was garroted in Barcelona yesterday (Wednesday) morning. He went to the scaffold with the usual Anarchist bravado, and met death with curses on his lips. His crime is well remembered. He threw the two bombs in the Barcelona theater that killed thirty people and wounded eighty more. The character of the man was clearly shown when, in the hope of escaping death on an appeal to a higher court, he professed religion and renounced Anarchy. This lasted until the appeal was decided against him, and then his true nature manifested itself in all its hideous malignity and hypocrisy.

It is the curious part of Anarchy that its hate is directed not so much against authority, or for the amelioration of misery, as against the working classes of society. The Anarchists who were executed in Paris cried out against the bourgeoisie. Franch exclaimed to his executioners Wednesday: "Do your miserable work. You are only the tools of the bourgeoisie." The Anarchists hate work as much as they do morality. They are permeated with viciousness. They are the mad dogs of the human race, and when one of them is killed society is made safer.

An Assessment Law or Defeat.

Port Tobacco Times.

Therefore let every Democrat in Maryland who has the maintenance of the supremacy of his party at heart resolve from this day onward that, come what may, the men who constitute the next Legislature of Maryland shall be such that the people may confidently and safely rely upon to enact an honest, moderate and conservative assessment bill, and that the Executive power shall be in such safe hands as to bar the possibility of the veto of such a measure.

This is what we must do to be saved.

An honest assessment of property will be the keynote and the watch-word of the next campaign in Maryland. Twice deceived, the people will not be deceived again. The men who are put forward for the suffrages of the people at the next election must be a guarantee of this policy, or all will be lost. It behooves every Democrat to keep this indisputable truth steadily in mind.

Will Li-Hung-Chang Revolt?

New York Herald

In China, according to a Commercial Cable despatch from Shanghai, the probability of Li-Hung-Chang, Viceroy of Pechili, refusing to obey any further orders from Pekin is being openly discussed as one of the probabilities of the near future.

It is said that the German officers who are his military advisers counsel him to follow this course and to turn the arms of his troops, about the only disciplined force in the Chinese army, against the imperial government.

Should he follow this course the downfall of the dynasty would be inevitable, and when peace was made with Japan it would probably be signed by a native Chinese and not a Tartar Emperor.

Meanwhile the Japanese are steadily advancing on Port Arthur, where a portion of the Chinese fleet is imprisoned in the harbor. The rest of China's war ships are reported to be at Wei-Hai Wei, which is closely blockade by a Japanese squadron.

No Further Monkeying With the Tariff.

Cumberland (Md.) Independent.

When the Republican party comes into power two years hence they will revise the existing tariff law along the lines of protection.—Daily News.

If the Republicans commence a mission like that, the job will lead them to destruction. Monkeying with the tariff brought the Democrats unprecedented defeat at the last election. The same thing drove the Republicans out of office in 1890 and will rout them again if they court the opportunity. The people are tired of tariff agitation and want no more of it than is absolutely necessary. Conservative Republicans know this. They also know that if the tariff is brought into a Republican Congress there will be a quarrel over it, just as there was over the same question in the Democratic Congress. The house divided against itself will fall and when a political house falls the inmates are always sore and sad.

Needs a Rest.

Philadelphia Times.

The Wilson tariff is altogether the best tariff measure that has been enacted since the necessities of war passed away. Like all such measures, it is far from being perfect, but with the exception of the questionable duty on coal and iron ore and the speculative duty on refined sugar for the benefit of the Sugar Trust, it is as nearly a complete tariff policy as could be enacted. It is safe to let it stand as it is until it shall be thoroughly tried by the country; and one of the unmistakable demands of the people at the late election is to stop fooling on the tariff question."

A Gaseous Comment.

Baltimore Herald.

A Rochester editor, who is also an amateur astronomer, viewed the transit of Mercury last Saturday from his private observatory and thence discovered that the planet is attended by a gaseous satellite. Being a reputable newspaper man, the discoverer is entitled to respect and credit, but everybody knows that Rochester is the producing headquarters of several beverages of gaseous reputation.

Too Prolonged.

TYPHOID IN OYSTERS.

Dr. C. A. Lindsley, secretary of the Connecticut state board of health, has completed his investigation into the typhoid fever cases at Wesleyan College, Middletown, which have thus far resulted in the death of two students. He is satisfied that diseased oysters were the cause of the epidemic. On the evening of October 12 at three secret society banquets held at the college raw oysters were served. Ten days later about 20 students were taken ill with typhoid fever.

The oysters were taken from beds in the Quinnipiac River, very near the outlet of a sewer. Dr. Lindsley has learned that the wife of a member of the firm which owned these oyster beds died but a short time ago of typhoid malaria fever. A daughter was also taken ill with the same fever shortly after her mother's death.

Some of the oysters taken from the Quinnipiac beds are now being examined at Yale College. It is learned that a student from Yale and another from Amherst, who were present at the Middletown banquets, have been taken ill with the fever. Three Wesleyan students are at present critically ill.

For a pain in the side or chest there is nothing so good as a piece of flannel dampened with Chamberlain's Pain Balm and bound on over the seat of pain. It affords prompt and permanent relief and if used in time will often prevent a cold from resulting in pneumonia. This same treatment is a sure cure for lame back. For sale by

A GREAT GAME FARM.

30,000 Acres in New Hampshire Fenced and Stocked.

A car attached to an eastbound special which passed through last evening was loaded with a small band of antelope. The unusual feature connected with the consignment was that the greater portion of the animals were youngsters, probably two months old. They were captured in the northern part of the state, and were enroute to New Hampshire, where they will be turned loose in the most famous game park in this country, if not in the world, now the sole property of the president of the Long Island Railroad.

Mr. Corbin, for whom the animals were purchased, is the owner of what is now acknowledged to be the greatest game park in the country. Among the preserves are a number of Wyoming elk, shipped by Col. William Root, of Cheyenne, about three years ago. They are said to have flourished splendidly, as, in fact have all other animals taken from the Rocky Mountains, save the antelope.

Mr. Buckingham, who was in charge of the car, has been in Mr. Corbin's service for the past two years, and gave an interesting account of what is a riyal to the Yellowstone National Park in a small way.

He stated that Mr. Corbin started in seven years ago by fencing in 5,000 acres of forest land in New Hampshire. Since then he has been gradually buying up more ground and adding to it, until at the present time he has nearly 30,000 acres inclosed with barbed wire fences twelve feet high.

Five years ago Mr. Corbin started in the animal business by turning into his park 120 deer, 150 elk, 20 moose, 30 antelope, 15 wild boars, about 20 buffaloes and a few reindeer. The reindeer and the antelope were the only animals that failed to thrive, and the increase in some of the other species has been marvelous. It is estimated that the deer and elk now number 1,000 head, the wild boars 350 and the buffaloes 60 head. Mr. Buckingham stated that his special charge are the buffaloes. During the winter the buffaloes are handled like cattle and fed in corrals. The other animals are proving self-sustaining the year round.

This year the park will be stocked with Rocky Mountain sheep. A rather curious experiment which will be tried this season will be an attempt to cross the elk with a herd of European red deer. If successful the result will be a magnificent animal. The only large animals which Mr. Corbin has indulged in the sport of shooting have been a few particularly ferocious stags and some of the wild boars.

GENERAL NEWS.

News has been received of sharp fighting between the Germans and the Waheke tribe, Africa. The governor of German East Africa, Von Schele, telegraphed from Dares Salasm that on October 30 Kuirenga, the capital of the Waheke territory, was stormed and captured by the Germans.

In Arkansas the total vote in three Congressional districts this year is less than the Democratic majority of two years ago in those districts. This is only one of the curiosities of an election with more politics to be learned from it than from any other in this quarter of a century.

The Missouri Supreme Court Tuesday established a most important ruling. It is to the effect that officers of defunct trust companies are not amenable to prosecution for receiving deposits when such concerns are in a failing condition.

The New York weather observer reports that Tuesday was the coldest November day that New York had experienced since 1873. In the morning the thermometer registered 21 degrees.

Dr. Jas. McCosh, the venerable ex-president of Princeton University, Princeton N. J., and a leading educator of the age, died on the 16th inst. in the 84th year of his age.
