The President's Message.

President Cleveland's message (given to Congress on Monday) is one of the most elaborate state papers that have lately come from the Executive of the The result is a market overstocked, and nation. It is not elaborate in argumentation, but simply in its concise presentation of the condition of every department of the government and our relations with every nation of the world. The vital political issues which have stead of by gradual and even process agitated the present Congress during the last session, are referred to with commendable brevity but with a clearness and distinctness of tone that none can misunderstand.

The entire revenues of the government during the last fiscal year were $372,802,-498.29, and the expenditures were $412,-605,758 87, leaving a deficit of $69,803,-260.58. The ordinary expenses of the government were $15,952,674 66 less than during the previous fiscal year. The deficit in the Treasury will be easily explained when it is understood that the receipts from customs fell off $73,536,-486.11 from the previous year, and the internal revenue receipts fell off $13,836,-539.97. Our dutiable imports were $146,-657,625 less than in 1893, and free imports were reduced $61,758,675. Our exports during the year increased $44,-495,378 exclusive of gold, of which we the General Assembly of Maryland in exported $76,898,061 as against $108,680,of gold was $72,449,119 as against $21,-174,381 of the previous year. Thus it will be seen that our importations have largely fallen off in both free and dutiable, and our exports of both gold and products have largely increased. It is estimated that for the present fiscal year the revenues will be $424,427,748 44 and the expenditures $20,000,000 more, leaving a deficit of that amount.

The total amount of money of all kinds in this country is presented at $2,240,-773,888, being an increase of nearly $40,000,000 over the year 1893, and the Treasury holds $41,615,177 55 of gold since. bullion, and silver bullion, valued at the cost purchase, to the amount of $127,-779,988. It will be seen that the government has to-day the largest amount of money available for circulation among the people that we have had at any time since the war.

Our pension roll now contains the increase of 3,532 during the last year, years. and 937,505 are receiving pensions on account of the war of the rebellion. Of that number 469,344 have been granted under the act of June 27, 1890, known as the dependent pension law. The amount paid for pensions during the year was $139,804,461.05, and $140,000,-000, or practically the same amount as $10,000. was expended last year, is the estimate for the current year. The President very justly refers to the fact that the efforts of the administration to cut off unworthy pensioners, and thereby make that it "suggests an unfortunate indifference to the commission of any offense which has for its motive the securing of a pension, and indicates a willingness to be blind to the existence of mean and treacherous crimes which play upon demagogic fears, and make sport of the patriotic impulse of a grateful people."

On the tariff the President is plain and explicit. He believes in enlarging our markets, in free ships for American commerce, in free coal and iron ore, in the repeal of the additional duty of onetenth of a cent per pound upon sugar imported from countries which pay a bounty on such exports, and also in favor of the repeal of the differential duty of one eighth of a cent on refined sugar. week, devoted considerable time to the His views on this point are summed up in the following brief but pungent sentence: "If with all the favors now accorded to the sugar refining interest ation. in our tariff laws, it still languishes to the extent of closed refineries and thousands of discharged workmen, it would in 1897 propose to give great prominence seem to present a hopeless case for to the agricultural department. To do reasonable legislative aid."

On the question of sound money and the scrupulous preservation of the national credit, the President speaks in no uncertain terms. He shows the utter that another exhibition may be held in impossibility of maintaining our present | Baltimore next spring in a permanent national circulation without constant building erected for the purpose. peril to the national credit, as good faith Architects are at work on plans for under the general law requiring the government to maintain the parity of silver and gold, requires silver certifi-cates calling for payment in silver through the heart. Government as will give the highest measure of safety to creditors.

On the question of maintaining the Electric Light Works of Baltimore faith of the government, and commanding for it unbounded confidence throughout the world, the President sizes up to city. the full stature of patriotic duty. He announces that the calamity of reducing Mr. Ira P. Wetmore, a prominent rea Spirit. These first, last, and all our financial system to a silver basis can. estate agent of San Angelo, Texas, has not be accomplished with his consent, and he also declares with emphasis that unless authorized to sell a different class of bonds by the present Congress, he will "I find it a perfect cure for our baby sell bonds under existing authority when troubled with colic or dysentery. "whenever and as often as it becomes necessary to maintain a sufficient gold without a bottle of this Remedy at hom reserve, and in abundant time to save by the credit of the country, and make good A. C. TAYLOR, Ellicott City, Md., and the financial declaration of our government."

Such is a summary of the President's message, and while much of it is necessarily commonplace because simply reproducing in brief the reports of departments, and while there is little of elaboration on even the most vital questions which now agitate Congress, there is unusual distinctness and heroism of expression in the brief paragraphs which relate to the grave problems of tariff and money which now confront the American people. The one paragraph on the subject of maintaining the credit of the government will do more to inspire confidence throughout the world in the integrity of the American people, than any deliverance that has come either from Congress or the Executive during the last decade. Upon the whole the and is fifty feet wide. message is in every way worthy of the Chief Magistrate of our great Republic. -Philadelphia Times.

Sugar and Its Protection.

Philadelphia Times. If tariff questions were considered without prejudice it would be sufficiently clear that the existing depression in the sugar market is attributable not to the new tariff but to the old. With free raw material, and a duly on refined sugar that practically prohibited importations, the business was stimulated unduly, and when it became evident that a portion at least of these exceptional advantages would be withdrawn, the Ameri can refiners very naturally laid in a large stock of raw sugar and increased their output in anticipation of the change. there is nothing for them to do but to diminish their production, and in some cases to shut down all together. Tariffs cannot destroy! the laws of trade; they can only hinder their natural operation, making them work by fits and starts inproducing violent fluctuations, and mak ing every branch of business affected by them more or less insecure.

Death of Ex-Goy. Bowie. Ex-Governor Oden Bowie died Tuesday morning at his home, "Fairview," in Prince George's county. HEART'S-EASE. Written for the Times. How fitting is the emblem that you bear, Sweet, modest, little flower! Each selfish sin and sordid care Flees from the heart which is your bower.

How delicate the flower, how modest and unassuming! No pretension to show

a distinction, always presenting an open, pleasing face to its sisters around; cheerful in appearance, never distressed by the causes that make its sisters of the garden close their eyes and look sorrowfully, because all is not uninterruptedly bright. Be its days passed in sunshine or shade, in the rainy season or dry, it is ever open, ever undisturbed. How cm blematic this is of the heart at ease, of a conscience void of offence both toward God and man, -of a possession of that sterling grace, Virtue, and that heavenly adornment, Religion.

As the little flower, taken as the sub ject of what we have to say, exerts an imaginary influence upon its sisters, so do the triumphs of Virtue exert an influence which stands the storms of life, and enable us to pass unhurt amid 165 pounds, and took first premium at temptations that may arise; and as the emblem of our subject has many parts necessary to the making of the whole, so has Virtue many divisions, each doing its part and all needed to adorn the life of the truly good-Modesty, Honesty, Industry, Temperance, Benevolence, Truth. Patience, Hope, Energy, Cheerfulness, and Charity the crowning of all virtues. Now, by Charity, we mean a disposition to think favorably of others, and to do them good, liberality to the poor,any act of kindness or benevolence. A man's usefulnesss in the Christian life depends far more on the kindness of his daily temper than on great and glorions deeds that shall attract the admiration of the world, and shall send his name down to future time. It is a little stream gliding through the meadow, running along day and night by the farm-honse, that is useful rather than the swollen flood or the noisy cataract. Niagara excites our wonder and fills the mind with amazement and awe, and while beholding this we realize that we are in the presence of God, and we behold what wonders his hand can do. But one Niagara is enough for a continent, while the world needs thousands of silvery fountains and gently flowing rivulets, that shall water every farm and meadow, and shall flow on continually with their gentle and quiet beauty.

So with life. - We admire the great steeds of Childs' benevolence, and of Peabody's munificence, and wish that all men were like them. We revere the names of the illustrious martyrs. But we are not all to do or to suffer like these; we are to be useful in more limited spheres; we are to cultivate the gentle
