JAPANESE ODDITIES. Japan, which already has its emaucinated women, its politicians, its demagogues, and even its anarchists, has, says a writer in the Revue des Revues, nevertheless kept intact a host of oddilies which, in a certain respect, are stranger still than those of of the Celestial Empire. The following are some of them While we write from the left to the right, the Japanese write from right to left. In writing, we form horizontal lines, while the Japanese make perpendicular ones. A Japanese book begins where ours ends, and, consequently, when we read a book we turn the leaves from right to left; but the Japanese are forced to turn them from left to right. We make our references at the bottom of the page; the Japanese place them at the

The Japanese women are odder than their books. European women show their necks and arms, while a Japanese woman carefully covers the upper part of her body and shows only her feet. A Japanese female is richly clothed up to the age of sixteen or seventeen, but a French female does not begin to dress in style until after reaching this age.

A Japanese belle is a small, very slender woman lost in a large piece of fabric, which permits of a glimpse of nothing but a pair of wild eyes in deep orbits and a vague, indescribable smile. A fair complexion is repugnant to her, and plumpness frightens her. A Japanese Venus would provoke a smile from an Aryan, while a European Venus would doubtless be considered in Japan as a type of a vulgar woman.

Among us it is the chaste women who usually shine by their intelligence, but in Japan intelligence appears to be the appanage of women who lead a more or ess frivolous life. We wear black as a sign of mourning, while the Japanese wear white clothing under the same circumstances. At our receptions, women always play the first role; they are served first and the best places are assigned to them. In Japan, things are entirely otherwise. The women remain standing while the men are esting. This ceremonial does not apply at soicees, for the simple reason of all medicines is to hold disease in that women in this case are conspicuous by their absence. Woman is the inevita- | cines in themselves cannot cure. Nature ble ornament at our fetes, but in Japan she is treated as an obstacle that works | isopathy, therefore, differs from that of injury to the splendor of the occasion. So woman is dispensed with, to the great satisfaction of all present.

We eat around tables of some size, but the Japanese are served at small tables placed near the wall, and which afford hospitality to but one person. Our servants hand the dishes to us from behind; in Japan they are presented from the front.

We always put the prenomen before the family name, while the Japanese do just the contrary We carry children in the arms: Japanese women carry them on the Japanese women. Women in all Europ ean countries exhibit a special predilection for some foreign language. French women speak Fnglish and English women speak French, Russian, etc. A Japanese woman speaks nothing but Japanese. It is to her, moreover, that gress that it has made in the last century Chinese language, which was considered as the exclusive monopoly of men. The lapanese women took hold of their only one who has contributed to the exotic literature, for, in addition to her, there are at least thirty writers and ing for the greatest glory of the Japanese renaissance. There is still another trait of character that distinguishes the Japanese from us Western people. We speak like true debauches, while the Japanese abstain from immoral language and prefer to it more or less immoral acts. The Japanese women, while competing with men, from a political and literary standpoint, have abandoned to them the monopoly of vice. So adultery on woman's side is almost unknown in

In the heart of a large pine tree, three and a half feet in diameter, James Miller, of Marionette, Wis., found a knife that was about a foot long and one and a half inches wide. The age of the tree is estimated by good judges to be over 200 years, and the knife was buried in it when the tree was in its infancy, for it is right near the heart and only about six feet from the base. A meteorite weighing 196 pounds has been found on the salt marsh east of Maiga downs, Northwest Australia. It was an iron-stoined mass of bright, pure metal, not a particle of stone being visble, and when struck with any hard substance rings like an anvil. It is two feet long, one foot at its greatest width and eight inches thick. Parisian stamp collectors have been discussing the question whether the Euglish stamp of 1840 cailed the Rowland Hill stamp is really the oldest in existence, and the conclusion arrived at is opposed to this yiew. They claim that the first French stamp detes from nearly

A NEW SYSTEM OF MEDICAL TREAT-MENT.

We all know what homeopathy and allopathy and hydropathy are, but probably few know what the new "pathy," isopathy, is. The word is applied to the medical treatment of diseases of the several organs of the body by the corresponding organs, or preferably extracts of them, of animals. Thus diseases of the brain would be treated by an extract of the healthy brain of an animal, such as an ox; diseases of the spinal cord by an extract of the spinal cord of some animal, and diseases of the heart by an extract of the heart of an animal. While the system is comparatively new to modern scientists, it actually is "as old as the hills." Two thousand years ago it was hinted at by Hippocrates, was mentioned by medical writers in the middle ages and was described at length fifty years ago by a German physician named Hermann. The system died out and attracted little or no notice until about two years since, when it was revived by Dr. William A. Hammond, a celebrated physician of Washington, D. C., Surgeon-General of the United States Army. By a longcontinued maceration of the brain, the heart, the spinal cord, etc., for a year or more, by processes that have been fully described in medical journals, principles contained in these organs, but in an inert form, are extracted and modified in a manner similar to that effected within the human body.

These principles are rendered practically indestructible by time. Dr. Hammond says that organic beings possess the power of assimilating from the nutritious maters which they absorb the peculiar pabulum which each organ demands for its development and sustenance. The human body, as well as the body of any animal, makes no mistake in such selection. The brain absorbs such principles as are necessary to su-tain its strength; so do the heart, the liver, the muscles, etc. In certain diseased conditions these organs lose the power of selecting the principles which they need, and sickness and sometimes death ensues. The object of the administering check while nature effects a cure. Medialone can do this. The principle of others "schools" essentially in the manner in which the remedies are to be introduced into the physical tissues requiring them. The established schools introduce the medicines generally through the stomach, thus requiring more or less time for their active principles to be assimilated with the organs affected. In isopathy the remedies are brought into immediate contact and assimilation with the organ, without being required to pass through the digestive system. This is the main difference, though there also is a difference in the character of the materia medica. It is Extensive Marble Belt in Georgia. The State Geologist reports that a belt of marble, 60 or more miles! in length, has been discovered in the northern part of the State. Some of the marble, it is said, is of a flesh color tinged with green and some is a light gray banded with black. It can be obtained in large sound blocks, and is susceptible of a high polish. The report, however, suggests that Japan. What European country could on account of the mountainous character of the region in which it lies it will be costly to quarry it. If the reports be well grounded, however, there will doubtless be plenty of capital and labor forthcoming to quarry it. Many of the newspapers of Georgia are confident that it will bring great wealth to the State.
