Dining Room for Ladies.

He Was a Lung-tester. An old man, with the appearance of a farmer, stood in the doorway of a Clark street business house, holding an ancient valise and gazing upon the surging throng. The proprietor of the place approached him, laid a hand on his arm, and said, pleasantly: "My dear sir, loitering in this doorway

"You needn't dear sir me," interrupt ed the farmer. "I know that I look like a hayseed, and that my whiskers grow the wrong way and that my coat is covered with egg stains, but no oily tongued stranger can work me, by gosh, I do live in the country, and I'm not ashamed of it, but I read the papers and I'm up to all the dodges you fellows have. So if you are trying to work off a gold brick or want me to cash a draft for $5,000, you are wasting your time "I am not that sort of a man; I am the proprietor——"

"Of a gambling-house along here somewhere? Well, you can't pilot me to it. When I left home my wife told me that I would be euchered before I got back, because my teeth are filled with sand-burrs and my clothes show where the calves have rubbed against me, and anybody would size me up for an old jay on a layoff, but I read the papers, and no greengoods man can work me for a cent, I know your racket, young man; you'll pump me for information about my home and my neighbors and find out that I am Giles Overborck, of Coles county; and then you'll leave me and when I have walked a block along'l come your partner with smiles an incl thick on him, and he'll grab my hand and say: 'Hello, Mr. Overborck, how's things at Charleston?' And then I'l grab him and pry up the street car tracks with him. Oh, I tell you, I read the papers if the English sparrows do build their nests in my hair, and no oily tongued stranger can get the edge

Then the proprietor grabbed the farmer and jammed him into the corner of the doorway, and cried: "I'm the proprietor of this place, and do not allow loading in the doorway. Do you hear that, you old lung-tester? The farmer gathered up his valise and got.—Chicago Tribune.

Between Salford and Manchester is a glue-factory. A lady, who was obliged to take the ride between those two points quite often, always carried with her a bottle of lavender salts. One morning an old farmer took the seat directly opposite her. As the train neared the factory, the lady opened her bottle of salts. Soon the whole carriage was filled with the horrible odor of the glue. The old farmer stood it as long as he could, then leaned forward and shouted: "Madam, would ye mind put-tin' the cork in that 'ere bottle?"—Tit

Ohio Farms. The Ohio State Labor Commissioner in his seventeenth report, gives much valuable information. The report is based on 8,671 farms, having a cash valuation of $62,788,239, or $43,45 per acre. Thirty-two cents is the average amount of taxes per acre, and the net earnings $1.77. The total mortgage indebtedness on these farms is $4,785,663, chiefly for purchase money. Average annual expense of each farmer's family was found to be $185.25.

First Voices of Spring "The other day I was walking besides a railway line with a man who was very hard of hearing. A train was approaching, and as it rounded the curve the whistle gave one of those ear-destroying shricks which seem to pierce high heaven. A smile broke over the deaf man's face. "That is the first robin, said he, 'that I have heard this spring.

Most beautiful of the native blackbird tribe is the purple grackle, a large bird of irridescent plumage, seen about the parks in spring, and nowadays sold to epicures and others, presumably to be made into pies.
