THE "BLOW HOLE," KIAMA, N. S. W.
 One of the most pleasant as well as famous tourist resorts in New South Wales is Kiama, a picturesque and thriving town surrounded by rich agricultural country, and which has been built upon an old igneous flow of basalt that has solidified and crystallized into huge columns of what is popularly called "blowstone." This formation is seen to perfection on the west coast of Scotland and north of Ireland at St. Fingal's Cave and other places; and those who are acquainted with the rugged appearance of the coast in these places can form a good idea of the appearance of the New South Wales coast at this point. Kiama, unlike other tourist resorts, can be thoroughly enjoyed in either fair or stormy weather, and those who visit the town when a good gale is blowing have an opportunity of witnessing a sight the like of which does not exist elsewhere on our globe. "The Blow Hole" is here situated, in the middle of a rocky headland running out into the sea, forming a truly wonderful sight. With each successive breaker the ocean spray is sent shooting up into the air sometimes as high as from 300 feet to 400 feet, descending in a drenching shower and accompanied by a rumbling noise as of distant thunder, which can be heard for many miles around.

This "Blow Hole" is a singular natural phenomenon, and consists of a perpendicular hole, nearly vertical, with a diameter of about 10 yards across, and has the appearance of being the crater of an extinct volcano. This is connected with the ocean by a cave about a hundred yards in length, the seaward opening of which is in all respects similar to St. Fingal's Cave on the west coast of Scotland, the same perpendicular passage leading to the sea. The walls of each. Into this cave towering waves rush during stormy weather, and as the cave extends some distance further into the rock than the "Blow Hole," on the entrance side, the water this cavity becomes full of compressed air, which, when the tension becomes too great, blows the water with stupendous force through the perpendicular opening.—Aust. Smart Little Boys.
 A little youngster of the east end was given five cents pieces by his father to spend as he wished.

While visiting his father in his office the other day he obtained permission to visit a peanut stand, which was near by, to dispose of his money.

He found when he got to the stand that in some way he had lost one of his pennies, so he went on looking for it. Boylike, he began to ask the price of everything he saw, finally winding up: "How much is your peanuts?"

"Why they're 5 cents a measure," replied the vendor, "but a wee boy like you don't want peanuts."

"Well, I'll be a cent he does," replied the boy.

The peanut man laughed, and finally said: "Well, I'll go you."

"The youngster then said: 'Well, give me 5 cents' worth of peanuts. So there' as he handed the boy the five cents worth of the vendor, who, after looking at it, said: "But look here, young man, you have only given me 4 cents."

"That's all right," was the reply of the precocious child. "Didn't I bet you a cent, and didn't I win it?"

And off the youngster walked, as the peanut man remarked: "Well, it's worth a cent to see a boy that is smart."—Peel's Sun.

Birds and Bugs.
 Before many years have passed the Legislatures of our States and nation will be forced to some action on the needless destruction of birds. The robins and bluebirds and wrens and the hundreds of other little singers of the woods and fields have been driven away not merely from the cities, which they used to inhabit, but in some cases from even the isolated hamlets. The increase in insect pests within our cities and yards and nearby farms and woods must remain the prey of the worms, the slug, the bug, the fly and other creeping and crawling things. No birds, no cabbages, no short trees, no potatoes, no flowers. It will be expensive in the future if all our hay as well as all of our garden truck has to be raised under glass.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Draw the Line at Generals.
 One summer a few years after the war a gentleman was traveling in the South, and he got to talking with a farmer in some little town who was employing a considerable number of men at his place. The farmer told him that most of them were old Confederate soldiers.

"You see over there where those four men are working?" asked he. "Well, all of 'em fought in the war. One of 'em was a private, one of 'em was a corporal, one was a major, and that man 'way over in the corner was a colonel."

"Are they good men?" asked the gentleman.

"Well," said the farmer, "that private's a first class man, and the corporal's a pretty good one, too."

"But how about the major and the colonel?"

"The major's so so," said the farmer. "But the colonel?"

"Well, I don't want to say nothing against any man who was a colonel in the war," said the farmer, "but I've made up my mind I won't hire no brigadier generals."—The Argonaut.

The Reign of the Candle.
 In domestic lighting, for nearly the first half of the present century candles held almost undisputed sway. Old stagers may yet recall the dimly lighted parlor, the fire burning softly in the twilight, where the elders kept blind man's holiday. The bell is rung and Mary brings in candles, a pair of molds in the brass candlesticks brightly polished, with snuffers on a tray, a sharp-beaked snuffer of steel, with jaws that open and shut with a snap, and something sinister in their appearance.

There were plated candlesticks and snuffers, too, for occasions of state, with silver brackets that suggested the spoils of Jerusalem. But there was also a lamp—a steady office of brass, that towered over the family circle at times, and shed a generous and genial light when so inclined. But what a demon it was to smoke, and to sneeze! It would burn when it condescended to burn at all, nothing but the very finest sperm oil at a fabulous price per gallon.

BALTIMORE CITY LIGHTNING ROD WORKS.
J. A. RUTH, Patentee and Inventor of the NON-OBSTRUCTIVE CURRENT TUBULAR COPPER LIGHTNING ROD.
 Also the Improved TRIANGULAR and MUNSON ROD AND OTHER RODS.

This celebrated LUMBERMAN'S Cassinette, owing to the material of which it is made and the manner of its construction, is the most complete protection against disaster by lightning ever invented. This is conclusively shown by a practical test of a great many years, during which time it has been in constant use, being erected upon many thousands of private and public buildings, in all sections of the country; and although there have fallen upon it, in numerous instances, most terrific discharges of electricity, yet in no instance has it failed to conduct it harmlessly to the earth, thus saving many lives and property of almost incalculable value. It has never been Overcharged. It has never Failed.
