NANSEN'S NORTH POLE PLANS. He Placed His Ship Across a Drift, Where-

by It Would Be So Carried.

A rumor, that for obvious reasons must lack foundation, has it that Dr. Frithjof Nansen, the Norwegian explorthat it is in a mountain district. The Doctor was hailed by a government steamer, a scaler or a whaler, homeward | Even now the most wonderful feature it will add to positive knowledge.

Every attempt heretofore made to go within several degrees of the pole has resulted in failure, and, too often, in disaster. What Lieut. Peary may now be doing we shall not know before the fall, but it chain of islands beyond Greenland that he believes to exist there, and that will form a connected highway to the top of the earth. Indeed, that is a minor consideration in the scheme, his first purpose being to give an ampler geographical definition of Greenland's upper coast than has yet been obtained.

The Fram, the three of running at its highest speed. masted schooner of 800 tons in which he of the earth, or the waters thereof-is thoughtless or ill-informed persons, is provided with a steam engine of 160 orse-power for emergencies, but it is understood that she will rely chiefly on her sails. It is obvious that she must do so, for the impossibility of coaling such a ess : I for a two or three years' voyage is obvious enough. Whatever game may be shot and fish taken or eggs found on the islands, the main stay of the company will be bread, a compact biscuit, and petroleum is used for heating, enough of that material being carried to last for eight years. The cabin is only 13 feet square, so that economy in warming and lighting can be practised, and in the long hours of the polar night the twelve men of the crew have access to a thousand books. For land exploration they carry light tents of silk, that material having the double advantage of being portable and comparatively wind proof. The clothing is waterproof. The ship is so constructed that she rises on the floes that might otherwise pinch and crush her, though, of course, that circumstance deemed very formidable, the man being outfit is balloons, and in February one of them was seen near Langfjord, sailing toward the southwest, which was in all probability one of Nansen's balloons carrying dispatches that may now be at the bottom of the Atlantic. The theory of the success on which the Fram was launched was based on the accident that brought disaster to the Jeannette. She was to take advantage of the current that kept the Jeannette drifting in the ice after she had been nipped on her emergence into the Arctic Sea through the Bering Strait. This current sets westward for a considerable distance, but also makes a northing, and it is Nansen's hope that he may get into the drift, though not into the pack, and be carried so close to the pole that he will reach clear water and get to his goal in safety. Relics from the Jeannette, in the drift from the the place off the Siberian coast where she went down, to Greenland, seeming to show that the current either went north, perhaps crossing the pole, and down on the other side of the earth, emerging through Davis Strait, where it becomes our Arctic curbeen truly calculated, the Fram may be at the Greenland villages before the summer ends. In the interest of science and humanity it is hoped that this may be so.

The other day a man and a woman called to see about renting a flat. The woman did all the talking, and turned to the man for confirmation or corroboration. He always agreed with her, and did it very meekly.

"Well," says the woman finally, "I will give you twenty-five dollars for the lat, won't we, John?" "Yes'm," replied the man. "And I'll pay my rent promptly, too, won't we, John?' "Yes'm,"

"And I'll take good care of the house, won't I, John ?'' "But," I inquired, as is usual in such cases, "are you man and wife!"

"Man and wife!" exclaimed the woman sharply, "indeed we are not, are we John?"

is now pressing through the ice—if he has had the luck to keep on the surface much written down as a man, although These comparisons are only one more many respects the superior, merely in feats of strength and endurance, of all the living world. He is not able to lead in many single tests, but, if a great, all round athletic contest could be arranged for all animals, represented by the best individuals of every species, man would surely win against all competitors. Some would outrun him. Others would beat him in carrying and lifting weights. Still others would outswim him. The monkeys would easily defeat him in climbing None could match him in throwing. None could go so many miles in a week or a month. Only the apes could compare with him on trapeze bars, and few living creatures could climb a rope as he could. The animals which could beat him in high jumping could not keep up in many other contests. In wrestling and fighting, where man is often considered least able to hold his own against the beasts, a Sandow would be more than is no warrant of her getting over a sea entirely unarmed. The grand average would certainly give man first place. The truth is that there are many ani

Therefore, the human animal is the most enduring of all, and his bodily equipment. merely in matters of strength, skill and prolonged exertion, is the best known in the whole animate world .- Creveland Leader.

ELECTRICAL APPLIANCES IN THE JAPANESE WAR.

The war between China and Japan has shown that the Japanese readily turn to account any advantage offered by scientific appliances. Their seizure of the telegraph lines in Corea strengthened that was crushed in the ice, were carried | their position at once, and any breaks were quickly repaired by men who had been trained in actual construction as well as the manipulation of the instruments. The Japanese are facile copyists, and have brought the telegraphs of their insular kingdom to such a state of perrent. If the fidelity of this current has fection since their introduction in 1870, that there is hardly a point on the vast coast line which could not be put into communication with the capital in a short time should a hostile fleet be sighted. In field telegraphy the Japanese have made great advances. Their instruments are modeled upon the latest European few short months, and consequently his forms. The poles are made in sections. knowledge of the English language is the bottom one being provided with not great. It is no wonder, then, says brass foot to be forced in the ground, and the wire runs out from reels carried on light hand barrows The telephonic system of police and fire alarms in Japan tation of certain sounds expressive of is very complete. The greater number of the Japanese vessels are lighted b electricity, and the skillful manipulation of their search lights in the war has excited favorable comment. Owing to the war, many of the lights and beacons have been extinguished on both the coasts of Japan and China, and false lights substituted, so that navigation has become perilous. The "submarine sentry" has rendered efficient aid in preventing dis asters. This recently invented electrical instrument gives warning to a vessel going ten knots per hour when the depth of water falls below twenty fathoms, so that the usual soundings may be taken.

The Monkey and the Sugar. A tame monkey in India recently was given a lump of sugar inside a corked bottle. The monkey was of an inquiring mind and it nearly killed him. Sometimes, in an impulse of disgust, he would throw the bottle away out of his own reach and then be distracted until it was given back to him. At other times he would sit with a countenance of the most intense dejection, contemplating the bottled sugar, and then, as if pulling himself together for another effort at solution, would sternly take up the problem afresh and gaze into the bottle. He would tilt it up one way, and try to drink the sugar out of the neck, and then, suddenly reversing it try to catch the sugar as it fell out at the bottom. Under the impression that he could capture the sugar by surprise, he kept rasping his teeth against the glass in futile-bites, and, warming to the pursuit of the revolving lump, used to tie himself into regular knots round the bottle. Fits of the most ludicrous melan choly would alternate with spasms of delight as a new idea seemed to suggest it-"What!" says I, "not man and wife?" periments. Nothing availed, however, "Not much. I'll have you know that until one day a light was shed upon the self, followed by a fresh series of exin this family we are wife and man, ain't problem by a jar containing bananas we. John?" the fruit rolling about in all directions. His monkeyship contemplated the catastrophe, and reasoned upon it with the intelligence of a Humboldt. Lifting the bottle high in his claws, he brought it down upon the floor with a tremendous noise, smashing the glass into frag-ments, after which he calmly transferred granted to the Societa Romana degli the sugar to his mouth and munched it Omnibus for the building of an electric with much satisfaction.—Christian Advocate.
