Reports have been received at Belair from various parts of Harford county of a new form of tomato blight, which threatens to materially affect the tomato crop. The disease has been noticed to some extent for the past two years, but this season, it is said, many entire fields are utterly ruined. The output from this county this season, will only be about one-fourth of the usual pack. It has been ascertained from the Agricultural Department at Washington and the Maryland experimental station that the disease is not confined entirely to Harford county, but that it is more or less prevalent throughout be almost an entire failure.
