GOLD BY THE HANDFUL, But Clouds of Giant Mosquitoes Keep

Treasure-Seekers at Bay. Gold in plenty may be found in the sands of the Volador River, a stream of moderate volume that comes tumbling from the snow line of the Sierra de St. Martha, in South America, but, though the lowland region and the river bed, where the precious metal abounds in fabulous quantities, are easily accessible. there that all attempts to rifle the sands f the gold have, so far, failed.

He took with him, when he set out, an ments and protected by heavy boots, gloves and veils. At the end of the second day, however, both employer and employes, with one accord, gave up the struggle and retreated. The next to try to wring fortune from these auriferous sands was an Italian, who obtained permission from the vice consul referred to above. The Italian started out with a party of six, who shared with him his belief, and so they took along no special protection against the insects. They endured for less than half an hour the awful torture, and then

Yet, there are human beings who can venture with impunity into this hell whose guardian demons are mosquitoes, and these are some of the savage natives of the mountains from whose rocky steeps the river comes tumbling down. These savages, who are mosquito proof, are rendered so by their bodies being covered with the scales of that awful disease, leprosy. The mosquitoes will

But neither gold nor the gauds of civilization will tempt them to labor, and there is no human power, apparently, which will drag them on from their rude caves on the mountain side and make them labor for the white men.-New York World.

The Conquests of Silence, Washington never made a speech. In the zenith of his fame he once attempted it, failed, and gave it up, confused and abashed. In framing the Constitution of the United States the labor was almost wholly performed in committee of the whole, of which George Washington after day, chairman made but two speeches during the convention, of a very few words each, some thing like one of Grant's speeches. The convention, says the Chicago Herald, however, acknowledged the master spirit, and historians affirm that had i upon, the Constitution would have been rejected by the peop!e. Thomas Jefferson never made peech. He couldn't do it. Napoleon, whose executive ability is almost without a paralleel, said that his difficulty was in finding men of deeds rather than words. When asked how he maintained his influence upon his superiors in any and experience. superiors in age and experience, when commander-in-chief of an army in Italy, he said: "By reserve." The greatness of a man is not measured by the length not been for his personal popularity and the thirty words of his first speech, pro-nouncing it the best that could be united

of his speeches and their number.

There was an old colored man pushing a whitewash cart along Brush street the other afternoon when a woman opened a chamber window and called to him:

"Hey, you! Do you want a job?"
"What sort of a job, mum?" he asked as he stood at the gate. "Carrying ashes out of the cellar." "Werry sorry, mum, but I couldn't do dat job. I used to be in de ashes bizness, but I'ze done quit it. If it was whitewashin' or beatin' a ca'pet I'd be

An Army of Moons,

Astronomers conceive it to be possible for the earth, under certain circumstances, to capture as satellites some of the roving meteoric bodies known to be numerous in space, instead of bringing them to the surface as aerolites. As these bodies are too small to be seen-a Send us your address and we will mail mass of 100 tons being invisible at 800 you Our Price List.

The mail orders will receive hundreds of invisible moons. Sir J. Herschel was even of opinion that such moons not only do exist, but that they may be large enough to be visible for brief intervals when beyond the earth's shadow, and Sir John Lubbock has supplied formula for calculating the dis-tances from observations of this kind. M. Petit, director of the Observatory of l'oulose, has been led by observation and calculation to conclude that the earth is attended by at least one meteoric stone of considerable size. It is about twenty. six times nearer than the moon, its orbit being about 5,000 miles from the earth's surface, or 9,000 from the center, and the tiny moon revolves around the earth in three hours and twenty minutes .-

Boarding Trains.

Queer questions come to an editor occasionally. Here is a writer who wants us to tell him "how to board a train." We have had very litte experience in that line. We once boarded a conductor for a short time, but we never undertook of the road where the train passes, as it would be manifestly inconvenient to drag the train across lots over plowed ground to some spot remote from the road, when the train wanted dinner. You haven't stated what kind of a train you desire to board. A fast express train, made up of Pullman palace cars, would be more particular about their I GIVE SPECIAL ATTENTION TO WAGON folder than an emigrant train, of course. A freight train would be profitable to board, if the crew were like those arrested by the Pan Handle road not long ago.

ANIMALS AS TEACHERS. Our Early Ancestors Borrowed Many

Trades From Nature. In his study of the "Relation of the Earth to the Industries of Mankind" Professor O. T. Mason infers that the earth was in the beginning and is now the teacher of the activities through which commodities are conducted through the progress of industries. "There were quarriers, miners, lumberers, gleaners and some say planters. There were fishermen, fowlers, trappers and hunters before there was a

"There were also manufacturers in clay, in textiles and in animal substances before there were potters, weavers and furriers. There were all sorts of moving material and carrying passengers and engineering of the simplest sort. It might be presumption to hint that there existed a sort of barter, but the exchange of care and food for the honeyed secretions of the body go-ing on between the ants and the aphidae looks very much like it. "The world is so full of technological processes brought about among her lower kingdoms that I would weary you in enuinerating them. Stone breaking, flaking, clipping, boring and abrading have been going on always, by sand blast, by water, by fire, by frost, by gravitation.

"Archaeologists tell us that savages are very shrewd in selecting bowlders and other pieces of stone that have been blocked out and nearly finished by nature for their axes, hammers and other tools. "In tropical regions of both hemispheres, where scanty clothing is needed, certain species of trees weave their inner bark into an excellent cloth, the climax of which is the celebrated tapa of Polynesia. Furth-ermore, the fruits of vines and trees offer their hard outer shells for vessels and for other domestic purposes and as motives in art and handieraft. "Among the animals there is hardly one that has not obtruded itself into the imagination of man and stimulated the inventive faculty. The bears were the first cave dwellers, the beavers are old time lumberers, the foxes excavated earth before there were men, the squirrels hid away food for the future, and so did many birds, and nest builders; the lawks taught men to catch fish, the spiders and caterpillars to catch fish beyond to make the bound of the catch fish the spiders and the spiders are spiders as the spiders and the spiders are spiders as the spiders are spiders as the spiders are spiders and the spiders are spiders as the spiders are spiders spin, the hornet to make paper and the crawfish to work in clay."-Popular Science Monthly.

Fortunes in Small Inventions. Some one has said that more money has been made out of ingenious trifles that out of some of the most important inven tions of the age. A great and expensive machine or article can be purchased by only the wealthy few, but the 5 cents and 10 cents novelties, the little trifles, the needles and pins and things, everybody wants, is able to buy and must have. Even such an insignificant article as a toothpick suggests the investment of enormous sums and the employment of a vast army of laborers. Some exceedingly fine inventions are used in the manufacture of these little splinters, and the money invested runs well up into millions. Toothpicks are used for many purpose besides the one that gives them their name. They are invaluable to the florist and have their place in a great many household performances. As little skewers for boiled and stuffed eggs and as splints to tie up broken plants they are useful, indeed indispensible, nothing seeming to answer so well. The day of small things is far from being despised, and there are companies representing large capital that are constantly on the lookout for trifling inventions from which they may receive large sums either by purchase and manufacture or by putting them on the market and paying royalty. The latter item, however small, foots up a very considerable aggregate to the inventor, and there are hundreds of people in this country who are living handsomely on the regular income derived from some of these children of their brains.—New York Ledger.

Stranded In London. R. S. Lawrence, a wealthy American who has spent much time in Europe, describes the danger to strangers of placing entire reliance on American letters of credit. Mr. Lawrenco was in London when the American Exchange went under and witnessed some of the distress among American travelers occasioned by that event. As many of our people had letters of credit based upon deposits at the Exchange bank, these letters suddenly became valueless, and the victims were in a painful predicament. It was quite different from such a disaster at home. They were caught in a strange land without friends and some of them without money enough to buy a breakfast. Some of them were en route in countries where a strange language was spoken. Those who were blessed with bank accounts at home could cable and sit down and wait, pawning their jewelry or something till a reply came. But lots of people go abroad leaving no such sheet anchor, though they may be in comfortable circumstances. These usually pawned everything to reach London. London was full of these unfortunates, and the greatest distress pre-vailed. Mr. Lawrence himself sent home at least 30 persons, either contributing some or the whole of the necessary funds. Nearly every one of these men was a total stranger to him. Mr. Lawrence says he never lost a dollar by reason of such assistance, every one promptly remitting the noney thus loaned, which he thinks highly creditable to the character of Americans abroad .- Pittsburg Dispatch.

Washington's Odd Street Names. In examining the directory one cannot help but notice the confusion of names of streets, alleys and courts. For instance, there are four Pleasant alleys in Wash ington, two Pleasant streets and Pleasant Plains thrown in. There are six Prospect streets, hills, alleys and courts in various parts of the town, and Prospect hills are as numerous out in the District as Fair-view schoolhouses are out in Indiana. people of Washington are quarreling as to whether the name of one of its streets is Stoughton or Staughton, they have allowed some of the alleys to be named as follows: Pigsfoot alley, Cabbage alley, Louse alley, Zigzag alley, Truck alley, Pig alley, two of them; Cow alley, Fighting alley, Blood alley, Tincup alley, and so on.—Washington Post.

Time's Corners.

Much may be done in those little shreds and patches of time which every day produces and which most men throw away, but which nevertheless will make at the and of it no small deduction from the listle life of man, -Exchapge.
