Some time ago I received from you a sample of some "Colic Medicine," I think, for babies and the literature on the subject. This was given for an infant_troubled with intestinal colic, and, at my next visit, the mother told me, that the baby had been quiet. The case was lost sight of until the other day, when another case, similar in all respects, came under my observation. I wanted to use your medicine but could not find the literature, To-day I found the empty box in which your sample was sent and now want you to favor me with another sample of your "Colic Mixture" and other remedies which you prepare. From my experience in the instance noted, I think ! will keep it on hand in the Fiture.

STRANGE STORY ABOUT THE MYS TERIOUS STATUE IN ROME.

The Discovery of a Diligent Young Man and the Fate Which Overtook Him-Silent Grandeur Revealed-Find the Moral if You Have Eyes to Sec.

There stood in Rome many ages ago a beautiful marble statue the mystery of which attracted the attention of all the wise men from far and near. Nobody could remember when it had been erected and nobody knew what it meant. It was the figure of a woman, tall, strong and supple. She stood erect, with her right arm outstretched, her mantla falling in graceful folds about her figure, on her face a look, half smile, half frown, luring, yet repelling, but always holding the observer by a strange feeling that it roused of mystery, glory and horror.

But even all that, written so clearly in the mystle signs that art uses, might have been overlooked by the people had it not outstretched hand was written in unfading letters, "Strike here." And therein lay the mystery. Years came and went and wise men puzzled their brains to find the secret. Seers from faroff lands came to Rome, at tracted by the statue, and still it stood, mute, cold, inexplicable.

by the statue. On the third finger of the

He had learned to love the face, the wise up the eastern sky, suddenly shone full

A strange thrill passed through the man, and looking in the direction indicated by the pointing finger he saw, some yards away, the shadow of the outstretched hand on the ground. He gave a lov cry, and after noting the spot well he de-How strange that no one had thought of that, but the man remembered that never before had he beheld the figure bathed in light as it then was.

That night at midnight he went to the place and began to dig in the ground where the shadow of the hand had fallen. A long time he worked, but nothing but earth could be find. After waiting all these years he was not impatient of a little labor, and ho still pursued his digging when suddenly his spade struck something hard. Then his zeal increased, and clearing a space he saw beneath him a trapdoor with a great stone ring. Grasping the ring, he pulled open the door and started back, dazzled, for a flood of light burst upon him from out of the depths. Quickly recovering, the young man looked again and beheld a wide marble staircase descending from the trapdoor. Throwing down his spade, he passed through the door down the steps and found himself in a vast hall. The floor of this room was of marble, pure white, while the walls and ceiling were of the same material in many colors. The huge pillars upholding the vast dome shone like alabaster. Rare paintings hung upon the walls, and rich rugs lay strewn upon the floor, their colors brought vividly into relief by the snowy background. In the center of the room a fountain stood. The water in its basin was as pure as crystal, but not a ripple stirred its sur-high, for, though the fountain was apparently perfect, no water rose from it to fall On seats running around this silent fountain were many men in rich brocades and costly fur robes. Lifelike they looked, but to the touch they were as marble. It was as if in the midst of life death had ear as it does when water falls from on come and patrified these beings in mock-Around on tables and benches were seat tered piles of gold and precious gems. Delicate enameled vases and swords inlaid with gems added their wealth to the place. But rarest of all the gems was a great arbuncle, which stood in a corner of the room, and from which came the sole light by which the place was relieved from darkness. In the corner opposite to this stone stood an archer, his bow bent, his arrow on the string, aimed at the carbun-cle. On his bow, shining with reflected light, were the words: "I am that I am. My shaft is inevitable. You glittering jewel cannot escape its stroke. As he looked on all this in silent wonder the young Roman heard a voice utter one word—"Beware!" Then he passed into the next room and found it fitted up as magnificently as the one he had just left. All manner of couches were about this room, and reelin-ing on them were wonderfully beautiful women. But their lips were sealed in this From there he passed on, finding many more wonders—rooms filled with treasures of art, stables filled with fine horses, granaries filled with forage. Everything that could make a palace complete was there. The servants were not lacking, but stood as if they had suddenly been transfixed. The young Roman returned to the hall. "I have here seen," he said, "what no man will believe. I know that of this wealth I should take nothing, but to prove to them that I speak truth can be no harm." Then he took in his arms a jeweled sword and some rare vases, but suddenly all was dark. The charm was broken. The arrew had left the bow and shattered the carbuncle into a thousand pieces. Pitch darkness overspread the place. Then the young man remembered the warning, but too late. And there he probably adds one more to the silent watchers of the magic chamber. Has this story a moral? Let those answor that have eyes to see.—Philadelphia Times.

Forest Air. There is a general impression that the humidity of the air is greater in the woods than in the open fields. This is contradicted, however, by the result of observations recently made in Germany. It was found there that the humidity. both relative and absolute, was slightly greater in the open than in the woods. and this was true equally in the morning and in the afternoon. As to the temperature of the air among the trees, it was a trifle higher than in the open in the morning, and in a more marked degree in the afternoon. -Youth's Companion

Suffered 25 Years. Patapsco Flouring Mills. THE "BISSELL CHILLED" PLOWS

ARE THE STANDARD PLOWS OF AMERICA.

The fact that six years ago it was comparatively unknown in this territory, and that its annual sales with us now mount into the many hundreds, prove that in the field it has shown its superiority. As is well-known the patterns are the latest of Mr. T. M. Bissell, the original inventor of the Chilled Plow. We believe there is no implement which the farmer changes more unwillingly than his favorite plow, but in the interest of supplying the best, we continue our offer, namely: Take a Bissell, put it in the field with any other chilled plow, and if our chains are not found true, which are that it is desirable in lightness of draft, ease of handling and quality of work done, combined with improved mechanical construction, return it to us and purchase money will be refunded.

All sizes, right and left-hand with their repairs, kept constantly in stock, and the prices are so reasonable as to justify substituting "Bissells" for all old-style plows.

THE DEERE "SHAKER" POTATO DIGGER.

THROWS THE POTATOES OUT OF THE GROUND AND LEAVES THEM -CLEAN AND WHOLE.--

Potato digging, at best, is tedious work; and when done either with the hoe or the plow, the crop is unprofitable.

The 'Shaker' has a broad and perfectly flat blade which enters the hill under the potatoes, and allows them to slide up on the blade and fall on the rods or fingers. The Rods and Fingers are hinged to the front end, and are free to play up and down. The Flange Wheel in the real lifts and drops these fingers: this motion causes a continuous shaking of the potatoes, knocking off the dirt, which drops through between the rods, leaving the potatoes clean and free to roll off on top of the ground. The Weed Fender separates the weeds and vines and prepares the way for the shovel. The Digger has Metal Handles, well braced; all steel.
