CALIFORNIA YELLOWS.

Some Reasons Why California Should Re

Called the "Golden State." California might be called the Golden State as much because of the gold of its flowers as that of its mines. No one will dispute its claim to this title who has seen its roadside gay with orange hued poppies, its meadows radiant with yellow dalsie and wild mustard, and its hillsides glowing with masses of yellow bloom.

While nature here supplied the richest soil and the rarest climate on earth, she withheld a sufficient rainfall, so that the California valleys lay, until 20 years ago, parched and arid during six months of the year. A singular instance of the fineness of the line between poverty and riches be-fore irrigation reclaimed this country was found in the massacre of horses in 1869

There was in the state about that time an enormous number of bronches. This fine species of horse has hardly an equal for grace, speed and endurance, and thousands then ran wild over the country. They lived on alfalfa, a kind of grass which there grows abundantly. When the crop dried up in the drought succeeding the rainy season, the horses were not worth the cost of their living. Their owners shot them by hundreds.

One clear sighted man saw a golden opportunity in the situation. He sold his ranch and bought 6,000 horses at $2 each. A condition of the sale was that he should take them out of the state within a week He started with them for Denver, and for six months braved the perils of a journey over mountain and desert and through a country peopled by Indians, whom he had alternately to fight and cajole. Arrived at last, the best horses in the "string" brought $50, the poorest about $20. At the end of seven weeks the im-promptu horse dealer went back to Cali-fornia with a fortune.—New York Dis-

HIS LITTLE SCHEME.

How He Proposed to Get Even With Hi Enemy. He stopped the big blue coated officer on Woodward avenue. "Say!" he exclaimed, "I want you to arrest a man up here for me. Can you do it?"
"You'll have to have a warrant first

What did he do?" 'What did he do? He threw me out simply because I asked him to subscribe "The best book in its line that was ever written," the officer hastily broke in.

"Why, yes. How did you know?" h asked the wielder of the club. The officer smiled a knowing smile and "But you can't get a warrant for that There's an unwritten law in this town that permits a man to throw out a book minute, and then suddenly brightening up eagerly seized the officer's arm and remark

"The law can't touch me, can it, if I work a nice little scheme I have in mind?" "Depends on the scheme." "Well, you see, I have a friend who's send him around to his place, and I won't say a word to him about how mean the man is who lives there. If the man pitches on to him-well, well, you just want to touch me, could it?" he inquired anxious-The guardian of the peace assured him that he thought he was safe. And after thanking the officer profusely he disap-peared down the street, again ready to take up the burden of life.—Detroit Free

On the Increase of Survivors. Among the curiosities of the United States census is the fact that the number of veterans drawing pensions on account of service in the Federal armies during the familiar with military statistics will not however, be surprised at this. Take, for example, the "thousand" who accom-panied Garibaldi to Marsala. To speak with absolute accuracy, this heroic band consisted of 1,051 souls, including two gal-lant Frenchmen. They fought with utter recklessness and suffered terribly from lack of food and shelter. Nevertheless it is computed that the survivors of the 'thousand" in Italy now numbers fully 7,000 men, and to those should be added at least 10,000 more who are at present either in the United States or in the Ar gentine Republic. I do not know precisely how many survivors of the six hundred of Balaklava there are now in Great Britain, but there is not a town of any size in the United States that does not boast of at least one of these gallant men, and we may safely as sume that there are fully 2,000 survivors of the six hundred in the United States alone, without counting those in Canada and the other colonies.—W. L. Alden in Sundowners In Australia.

Titled lords, baronets, parsons, lawyers, captains, architects, clerks-all these are to be met with on the roads. They can be divided into two broad classes-viz, those who are looking for work and those who are seeking to avoid it. The former consist of a fine set of men of all ages, ready and willing to undergo the hardships of a weary tramp of hundreds of miles, along which they push forward hopefully to find the work which is generally to be had by those who are willing to search for it.

Their "swag" is generally made up of a pair of blankets and a pair of trousers, a spare coat, two or three shirts and pairs of socks, a brush and comb, towel, needle and thread, etc. For stores they carry bread or flour, sugar, tea, carbonate of soda for making damper, a billy pannikin and knife and fork. This is a fair average swag, though it will often be supplemented by sundry little additional luxuries, according to the individual idiosyncrasy of the owner.—Temple Bar.

All the world over there are legends about mermaids. The Chinese tell stories not unlike others about the sea woman of their southern seas. Mankind is taught on the most excellent evidence that a mermaid was captured at Bangor, on the shores of the Belfast Lough, in the sixth century, while another caught at Edam, in 1403, was carried to Haarlem and kept

Gay Jackets of Fishskin.

The Eskimos of Alaska make jackets of the skins of the red spotted trout of that region, known as the Dolly Varden, which they tan for this purpose. The Dolly Varden is a handsome fish of a pale purplish gray color; it attains a length of 214 feet and a weight of 10 to 12 pounds. The skin is waterproof, and with its bright red spots it makes a very showy jacket.—New York Sun.

The word preposterous originally meant a process of reversing the natural order of things, such as indicated by the common expression "putting the cart before the horse." By an easy gradation it has come to be used in its present significance.

The investigations of Weber have shown that the curliness of hair varies with its flatness. The flatter it is the more it carls Curling irons flatten the hair.

JUSTICE TO THE PUPPY.

Cleared of Contumely.

stand as an emblem of the most despicable member of the human family. When a man discovers traits of meanness, when he betrays a meddlesome, prying, caddish disposition, we are too prone to characterize him as a "puppy" without stopping to think of the contumely there-by heaped upon the canine animal of im-

'puppy," properly considered, is a high and undeserved compliment bestowed up-on the object of our contempt, but while we thus unintentionally honor the cad, we do a distinct and unwarranted injuslice to the puppy, for it is a sort of insinuation that he is no better than the man to whom he is likened, inasmuch as by calling a cad a puppy we as much as say that

The puppy is frank, free and frolic-some, always in the best of humor, with nothing underhand or mean about him. He never sulks in his kennel nor complains because things do not go just as he wants them to go. He makes friends with everybody, the rich and the poor, the high and the low, the good looking and the ugly, and he is no respecter of silk, satin and broadcloth above cotton or fustian or

He is not squeamish as to his diet, and takes what is given to him gladly, and as much more as he can get hold of. He may and does rend your doormat and demolish stray rubbers and make ravelings of your raiment, but he does all this jocosely and without malice. It is his safety valve, the instinct given him whereby he may blow off some part of his ex-uberant liveliness.

animated good nature. His is the genial temperament, his the merry making disposition that would have all nature, animal and vegetable, share in his joys. Therefore, to call a mean spirited fellow a puppy is a gratuitous and unwarranted libel upon the four footed ingenu, and it is time that justice was done to the puppy by no longer making him the emby his name. A puppy does not put on airs, nor turn up his nose at people whom he fancies are below him—if, indeed, he ever considers malicious. He tries to be everybody's of any one.

Prices Two Centuries Ago. The question of prices in the first quarer of the seventeenth century is full of interest to every one, and it is satisfactory to find that food was not as fabulously cheap in the days of our forefathers as we are often led to believe. Mary Verney writes to Ralph at Blois complaining bitterly of the dearness of provisions in London. Beef is fourpence, veal and mutton eightpence, while Pen Verney reckons 8 shillings a week too much for her diet, which is afterward fixed at £6 a year. Twelve pounds a year seems a great deal for willful little Betty, aged 13, to spend on her dress, but country bred as she was she declines, Mary writes, to wear anything but silk. The sum of £50 claimed by Nancy Denton, who was a spoiled townspeople who could not resist the temptation of trying some new device, for the same reason that Timothy took the wine-"for his stomach's sake"-dropped in their pennies and took a push and pull out of the machine. But that was all. No result followed, and there was some talk of blowing open the hoarded treasure. At the end of the week the agent rea peared, unlocked the machines, garnered the wealth and retired after explaining that "exercise was the greatest thing for digestion in the world." The crowd was

It Is Time That His Name Should Be

It is high time that a word should b spoken in apology to the much abused puppy, who has for years been made to mature years.

Instead of being a term of reproach, the puppy is a mean, sneaking upstart of a creature, which he is not.

The puppy is the very quintessence of blem and the analogue of the man we call anybody below him-neither does he indulge in liquids more potent than milk, nor make himself odorous with cigarette The puppy is mischievous, but never were far in excess of what we should give now, in spite of the exceeding simplicity -not to say remarkable unpleasantness of their pharmacopcela and treatment. Dr. Theodore Mayence, the fashionable doctor, left £140,000 (equivalent to over $500,000) behind him, and Sir Ralph is miserable because he cannot afford to pay Dr. Denton the £50 which is the ordinary fee for a confinement. A Venetian mirror costs £40, a portrait by Vandyke £50. A maid's wages come to £3, but the pair of "trimed gloves," with which it is the fashion to reward any extra services on her part, comes to £1 5s.—an absurdly disproportionate payment. The price of Sir Ed mund's Covent Garden house is £100, and many horses fetch as much, while £200 a year is the usual price for a boy's board and teaching in a good French family .-

It is rarely that a European traveling through central Africa has the fortune to meet with the giant of African reptiles, the python, alive in his jungle home, but the Zomba Gazette narrates that two gentlemen in the administration service, who were proceeding from Blantyre to Zomba, were brought to a standstill the other day near the Namasi military station by a splendid specimen, which disputed their right of way. The servants caught sight of him before coming within reach of danger, when, with the greatest excitement, they reported their find to a gentleman named Wheeler, who happened to be in named Wheeler, who happened to be in the van. Mr. Wheeler approached within ten yards of the python and put a bullet through its head, which, though not killing him outright, rendered him incapable of doing any harm. For half an hour after this the snake continued to writhe, and the natives would not go near him, stating that he was "mkali" (fierce) still. However, Mr. Cunningham, who was the other traveler, arriving on the scene, put an end to matters by cutting the reptile's head off. The body was afterward taken to Zomba, skinned and found to measure 18 feet, 2 inches from the point of the head to the tip of the tail, allowing 6 inches for the head, which had been cut off.—
