QUEEN OF THE WEST.

California, Where the Sun Gives Uncle Sam a Good-Night Kiss. Glowing words of praise were uttered by Rev. E. D. Dille, of San Francisco, when he described California to the Christian Endeavorers at Boston. "Were it not that Californians are all as modest as violets, outblushing the strawberries that grow there the year round-blushing like their world-famed fruits at praise of their own loveliness-I would tell you something of California-though had I the tongues of men, and even of real estate agents. you would still say when you come to us, 'The half has not been told!' We have a wonderful empire out there; we have arable land enough to support a population of 30,000,000, and then our population would be less dense than that of Europe; an empire of our own, as large as Spain-larger than the nine States of Delaware, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, New York, New Hampshire, New Jersey, Ohio and Rhode Island combined. Then the salubrity of our climate makes California the sanitarium, the fairer Italy of the world; its scenery is grander than any beneath European skies, and its variety of productions and climate is so wonderful as to defy even the Californian genius for exaggeration. The Sierras, those snowy bulwarks of our State, though their lower slopes are rich in gold as their crests at eye with the gold of sunset, and their farther slopes are lined with silver like, those great crests at noon, yet hoard no such wealth as the soil yields in its billowing wheat fields, its clustered vineyards, its orchards and orange groves bending with fruit more golden than that of the Hesperides. Yonder the star of the empire stops in its westward course and stands still over our young State."

Two Engaged Girls. It's as good as a circus to listen to the general conversation of two engaged girls. The interesting dialogue usually jogs along something like this: "We haven't decided yet just when we're to be married, but I think perhaps it'll be some time in---" "Mine is going to be a swell church wedding with a tulle veil and flower girls and white ribbons strung up the aisle and-"

"Dear me, I wouldn't be married in church for loads of money. I never could say 'I will' before a crowd of people. A simple little home wed---" "Jack says he knows I'll look sweet in white satin gown, and white is so becoming to me. Jack says that I'll be the prettiest bride in the world. Of course, his ideas are a trifle biased, but—" "Oh, say, you ought to have seen Will when he proposed to me. He acted just like a lunatic and I wanted to laugh so that I thought I'd die. He plumped down on his knees and grabbed zay hands and began to talk in the wildest manner, and-" "Hub, Jack wasn't that way at all He was as dignified as a-as a park policeman, and he folded his arms and said: 'Marie, dear, I love you with all my heart---"

"----And, upon my word, I felt just like yelling for mother, she has such a fondness for humorous scenes. But after a while he got sort of rational and-"

"---And Jack said---" At that point there is such a sa words that it is impossible to unclasp one girl's talk from that of the other. Each appears to talk especially for her own benefit and pleasure and pays absolutely no attention to her companion's remarks. Shakspeare, when he declared that love and lunacy were of the same order of affliction, certainly hit the nail on the head .- Chicago Rec-

CRUSOE'S ISLAND.

SELKIRK'S SOLITARY HOME OPENED TO SETTLERS.

The Scene of Deloc's Immortal Romance Becomes a Convict Station—Chile to Colonize Her Pacific Possession.

HERE has been received during the past thirty days news from Chile which will not be regarded as joyful intelligence by the friends of Daniel Defoe, says the San Francisco Bulletin. Poor old Robinson Crusoe's hut on Juan Fernandez Island is to be torn down, and in its place will be erected a prison station, to be used as an auxiliary to the Chilean penitentiary at Santiago. Juan Fernandez is to be thrown open to settlers, and rumor is extant that Mocho Island will also be advertised as "a splendid place for a poor man to make a fortune." Mocho Island is mentioned in connection with the story of Juan Fernandez, because, according to South American historians, the spot was probably the landing place of Sailor Alexander Selkirk, whose adventures Defoe elaborated into chapters of marvelous marrative, instead of the lonely rock several hundred miles in a southwesterly direction from the port of Valparaiso. Doubt still exists in the minds of a number of Chilean writers as to the identity of the island on which Selkirk spent four years of lonely exist-

The Chilean Department of Colonization has never been inclined, in the past, to invite settlers to the islands lying off the coast of Chile and owned and controlled by that Republic. Robinson Crusoe's domain has been zealously guarded by representatives of the Chilean Government, and all attempts to settle upon it or to learn the secrets of its queerly shaped canons, ranges and peaks have been discountenanced by stolid officials of that little southern Nation.

The opposition of the Chilean Government to the colonization of Crusoe's old home dates back to the overthrow of the Spanish powers on the western slope of the Andes and the securing of Chilean independence. Shortly after this important change in the political complexion of New Spain, England dispatched ambassadors to ascertain the extent of the resources of the territory claimed by the new Republic. The Embassy was not received with open arms by the South Americans. The Chilean President suspected that England wanted to acquire one of the islands off the South American coast for a naval station, and when the Embassy desired to inspect Selkirk's seabound retreat it met with a polite but very positive refusal of passport privileges.

This anti-colonization feeling influenced future Chilean Presidents, and not until the rise of Balmaceda to power did the Government consider the feasibility of colonizing both Mocho and Juan Fernandez Islands. The present ruler of Chile favors the movement, and before the year is over the authorities will have divided the islands into small tracts and placed the property on the market.

Juan Bautista Pastene, the Italian explorer, is alleged to have visited Crusoe's isle before he did the isle of Mocho. The records do not bear out this statement, although in the Government library at Santiago there is a volume of correspondence which refers to Pastene as one of the early visitors to Juan Fernandez. Pastene did visit Mocho in 1814 and again in 1850. He is alleged to have reported that he believed that Defoe's hero was really marooned on Mocho instead of Juan Fernandez. However, on Mocho Pastene found a superior race of savages, who were of a much higher order of intelligence than those spoken of in Crusoe's diary. On the other hand, there really were signs of cannibalistic feasts of days gone by in the high sands of the more remote island.

Selkirk's hut faces the southern ocean, and is a diminutive affair, which the keepers of Juan Fernandez did not think worth disturbing. It is to be remodeled shortly, for the new branch prison will be built on the spot where it stands. Directly under the little house is a broad beach, partly protected from the winds by a high bluff which commands from its crest a splendid view of the island and the surrounding Pacific.

Selkirk, it is said, used the top of this biuff as a signal station, and for four years he patiently watched for passing ships. At the base of the cliff viong reef runs seaward, marked here and there by sharp pointed rocks, over which the surf dashes incessantly. One word about Selkirk himself. English record keepers and historians aver that the man was a seaman, who was marooned for mutiny, but South Americans claim that the fellow deserted from an English trader inbound to Valparaiso, and, after stealing a boat, sailed for what he thought was the mainland. He landed on Juar Fernandez Island, and there found & semi-fertile land, visited frequently by heavy rain showers, the home of water fowl, and everything but a tropical paradise such as Defoe portrayed in his remarkable record of human imagination. The interior of the island was very rocky, and the flore and fauna of the land were of that limited character ascribed to "Treasure Island" by Robert Louis Steven Th visits of cannibals to the beach of Juan Fernandez are supposed to have been related by Defoe in "Robinson Crusoe" simply to lend interest to his story. The tribes of south Chile and Mocho Island are not thought to have taken long canoe trips to the outof-the-way rock, but savages, according to geological students, did frequently visit the place years and years before Daniel Defoe and his prolific pen were ever heard of. Bones of a race of men of the statue and strength of the Patagonians have been found buried deep in the island sands, together with stone and bone weapons used by tribes on the south continent centuries ago, and at a time when Cortez, Pizarro, and other Mexican and South American explorers were boys at school. The truth in the matter is that Defoe had little to learn from Alexander Selkirk or the island of Juan Fernandez that might have aided him in the foundation of the character of Crusoe. The evolution of a tradition developed Selkirk into the Defoe Crusoe; at least, that is what the Chileans say,

A most curious case was that of a wealthy merchant in Leadenhall street, whose forgetfulness was a byword. Ten years ago he put $50,000 in his bank, to his private account, and immediately forgot all about it, having neglected to fill up the counterfoil in his deposit book. A few months ago, while tearing up some old papers, he came across a penciled note bearing the words, "Bank $50,000," and a date which he was unable to decipher. He made inquiries into the matter, and found that he was wealthier than he thought by $50,000 with interest. How he overlooked the amount it is difficult to say. He is still noted for the haphazard way in which he keeps his private accounts. The old woman who forgot the exstence of a legacy of $1000 a year rom her master was another instance of carelessness. Here the old lady, a one-time housekeeper, could hardly read or write. When she received a a letter from her late master's solicitors to the effect that the legacy would be paid quarterly on application at a city bank, the lucky woman for a fort-right was none the wiser. The important look of the seal on the envelope and the fine note paper caused her to make inquiries, and a friendly neighbor, after much effort, spelled through the letter. The old lady, who was in poor circumstances, could not believe the good news, and so, without going to the bank, she decided that the letter was a hoax .-London Tit-Bits.

The best opinion published comes from a man who for eleven years was the engineer of an express train on the New York Central Railroad. He says he never met an engineer who preferred a slow to a fast train. It is utter rubbish, he declares, to say that a fast train entails a greater strain on the nerves. The knowledge that precautions are taken to keep the line clear for flyers takes a deal of anxiety from the engineer's mind. As a class, they are notably healthy and longlived.

This American engineer says he knows a number of engineers who retired when they were seventy years old, and they were then enjoying robust health. One of the most daring engineers in the United States is sixtythree years old, and is the picture of health. Accidents to trains when running at high speed are exceedingly rare.
