from the time he was two weeks old, cried and screamed day and night with colic. I tried all simple home remedies usually edicacious in such cases but without avail. A neighbor advised me to try your Colic Care. I had by this time reached such a state of distriction that I was willing to try anything that I considered safe. I found it to be all you claim for it and wish every mother who is deprived of her rest by a crying colicy baby could understand how valuable this remedy is and would need no persuasion to try it. I have used the Teething Lotion also and recommended it to a neighbor for a baby cutting his double teeth; she found it highly satisfactory.

THE CHINESE LANGUAGE.

There Are Six Classes of Characters, but

No Alphabet In Use. The peculiarity of the Chinese language consists of the fact that they have a written and printed language and no alphabet, every word in their vocabulary having a separate character of its own. These characters are divided into six classes, the to-tal number being about 24,235. The first class, according to eminent Chinese philologists, includes "imitative symbols." These are 608 in number and are believed to be the very first Chinese symbolic signs invested. The second class includes the "symbols indicating thought" and are 107 in number. These characters are formed in such a way as to indicate by their form or position some idea referring to the relative circumstances pointing to them. The third class includes 740 characters known as "combined ideas." This class bears some relation to our compound words and comprises characters made up of two or more symbols to form a single idea. The fourth class is listed as "inverted significations" and includes 372 characters, which, by some inversion, contraction or alteration of parts, are made to acquire different meanings. The fifth is the great class of "united sound symbols," containing 21,-810 characters. The sixth class, which has no fixed number of characters, is listed under the head of "borrowed uses." This ciass includes metaphoric symbols and combinations in which the meaning is induced by some fanciful imagination. But a few hundred of these have been figured in characters by the type founders, but imaginative writers have been known to use thousands that are not regularly recognized as belonging in the language and which are not included in the sum total of 24,235 characters mentioned in the open-

Certain fanciful writers, so Dr. Williams says, have been known to uso as high as 260,000 such symbols. The authority referred to in the foregoing sentence, while he admits that romantic writers have been known to employ upward of 260,000 characters in their writings, closes his article on that subject by saying, "While an enormous number of characters are occasionally employed, running in some instances far above 200,000, it may be safely said that a knowledge of 10,000 characters will enable one to read any work published in the Chineso language and to write intelligently on any subject."—St. Louis

RATHER EMBARRASSING.

The Predicament In Which a Hasty Marriage Placed a Clergyman.

"One of the funniest and yet the mos embarrassing things that ever happened during my ministry," said a clergyman to a reporter, "happened while I had charge of a church in a small town. One Sunday I had for a guest a clergyman who had removed from our town to a distant city about ten months previous. As he was a very popular man with his towns-men I asked him to occupy my pulpit that Sunday morning. It happened that just young man, who had only been married a short time, lost his bride and was completely crushed by the blow. Fears were entertained for his reason, and every one escorting his wife's remains to her former home he met a most charming young lady, and in less than six months they were married. But the clergyman knew nothing of this, and when on that fateful Sunday morning he stood in the pulpit and saw before him this young widower, as he supposed, he naturally thought of his bereavement. So it was that during his prayer the congregation was amazed to hear him begin to pray for this young man. He said: " 'There is before you, Lord, a young man who has suffered a recent and terrible affliction and for whom we ask your special blessing. Be near and comfort him in his last affliction, keep him safe in life and be near him when death shall remove him from his great sorrow.' "Just think what that poor man and his new wife must have felt sitting through such a prayer as that. The whole congregation gasped."—Indianapolis Sen-

The Acadians. The story of Evangeline is in mind, and we read from the poem as we ride along, and our hearts are touched with pity for the poor Acadians turned out of house and home, taken away from their beautiful land and driven into exile. There are places from which one might be exiled with equanimity. Acadia is not one of The offense of the Acadians was their nationality. They were loyally and aggressively French. Forty years before their exile France had made a treaty with England and had delivered up this peninsula of Nova Scotia into English possession. It belonged to England. But the people who were thus disposed of did not concur. They refused to be Anglicized. They declined to take an oath of allegiance. They imbittered and endangered the lives of the English garrison at Annapolis Roy-Whatever they could do against their governors they did. And the situation became intolerable. France and England were fighting at Fort Duquesne and elsewhere, and the Acadian farmers were sending their sons to join the armies of the French. It seemed essential to the success of the English arms on this continent that there should be a peaceful possession of Acadia. And when milder measures failed the English adopted that expedient which the story of Evangeline has made one of the best known incidents of history.

—Pittsburg Dispatch. Readers. I wonder why it is that it is no longer good form to speak of "reciting" anything. The folks who used to be "elocutionists" are all "readers" or "entertainers" now, and they never "recite," they "read." I was at a house a fortnight ago, and among the guests was a young man who can make shivers run along your spine by the way he repeats "Old Love Letters." The hostess asked him to sing.

He said that he wouldn't sing, but he would read to us. "Thank you so much," said the hostess.
'What book shall I get you?" "Oh," said the man, and all his ability didn't help him to see the absurdity of it. "I will read from memory."-Washington

The Wrong Name.

In applying for a marriage license a Chicago man signed the name of his employer to the affidavit and was compelled, when he discovered his mistake an hour later, to have the clerk make out another document. The man explained that for many years he had been accustomed to righ his chief's name to business papers, and it had become a sort of second nature.

Rough on the Doctor. A correspondent of The Muenchener Neueste Nachrichten affirms that the office of physician to the sultan of Zanzibar is far from being a sinecure. Probably, to guard against poisoning, the unhappy doctor is compelled to swallow one-half of the medicine prescribed by him for the sick

In parts of Austria and Italy there is a superstition that the human saliva is a zore for blindness. The idea probably originated in the miraculous healing of ilind man recorded in one of the gospels.

ence between them. A man does not attempt to drive a nail unless he has a hammer; a woman does not hesitate to utilize anything, from the heel of a boot to the back of a brush. A man considers a corkscrew absolutely necessary to open a bottle; a woman at tempts to extract the cork with the seissors. If she does not succeed readily, she pushes the cork in the bottle, since the essential thing is to get at the fluid. Shaving is the only use to which a man puts a razor; a woman employs it for a chiropodist's purposes. When a man writes, everything must be in apple pie order-pen, paper and ink in apple pie order—pcn, paper and ink must be just so, a profound silence must reign while henceomplishes this important function. A woman gets any sheet of paper tears it perhaps from a book or port per, tears it perhaps from a book or port felio, sharpens a pencil with the scissors, puts the paper on an old atlas, crosses her feet, balances herself on her chair and confides her thoughts to paper, changing from pencil to pen and vice versa from time to time, nor does she caro if the children remp or the cook comes to speak to her.

A man storms if the blotting paper not conveniently near; a woman dries the ink by blowing on it, waving the paper in the air or holding it near a lamp or fire. A man drops a letter unhesitatingly in the box; a woman rereads the address, assures herself that the envelope is scaled, the stamp secure and then throws it vio lently into the box. A man can cut a book only with a paper

For a man "goodby" signifies the end of a conversation and the moment of his departure; for a woman it is the beginning of a new chapter, for it is just when they are taking leave of each other that women think of the most important topics of conversation.

A woman ransacks her brain trying to mend a broken object; a man puts it aside and fergets that fer which there is no remedy. Which is the superior?-Lippincott's Magazine.

America Through English Eyes. They like giving big names to things in America. A pond is a lake, and a hill is a mountain. They never speak of the sea; it must be called the ocean; a meeting is a convention, a dictionary is a "spoller and n definer," a town is a city, a chairman is a president, and so on. The only exception I know of is that the wealthy people who own those charming country residences at Tuxedo and Lenox call them cottages. But these are not average Amer icans, and in that country the manners and customs, as seen by the ordinary traveler, are governed by the average man, who is not a good specimen. He is apt to be a most awful "bounder," has no taste and does not know the meaning of the word "repose," but you need never meet this type except in railway trains and ho-

His ideal, as one of them told me, is to spend his nights "on the cars" and his days in getting the better of his fellow men. But the refined American is quite different. These are mostly met in Washington and the south, and, of course, Boston is a thing apart, and as you approach this town you are told that the humming you hear is the noise of people reading Browning. Tuxedo also is a great exception, where you can have congenial society. It is a large estate with woods and lakes and 40 miles of well laid roads. Country houses or cottages have been built all over it, and there is an excellent residential club-into which, however, the fomale element has progressed so far as to have introduced even babies into the bedrooms!-George Forbes in Blackwood's Magazine.

Not Such a Rich Find. "I had a funny experience the other day," said Lawyer J. E. Delman of the Equitable building to a reporter. "It didn't seem funny at the time, bu I can laugh at it now. I found about $2 in silver and picked it up from the floor.' "That's pleasant," said a friend who was present, "but I wouldn't call it

"Ah, but I went into a saloon with some friends and found half a dollar near the door, which I 'biew in' for drinks. I heard something drop and picked up two more quarters. Blew them in too. "Then I felt coin thropping down against my log. Suddenly the truth flashed on me. I found a big hole in my pocket, out of which about $2 in change had dropped. All the money I had picked up was my own, and $1 was lost altogether besides. -New York Journal.

Artistic Keys. Keys, in our own day, have not only lost their former beauty, but are fast losing their significance as well. With the adoption of patent contrivances and strong box "combinations," the whole tribe of portable keys threatens to become as extinet as tirling pins, tinder boxes and warming pans. One of the most curious is that of the unfortunate Mary, queen of Scots, which had, in addition, a rather curious history after it- left the hands of its royal owner. It is said to have passed into the possession, successively, of the late Duke of York, a nurse, a physician, a locksmith and an Edinburgh architect before its origin was known-the cipher "Marie" being very intricate, although the thistle, joined with the crown of France, might have given some clow to its possessor.—Cassell's Magazine.

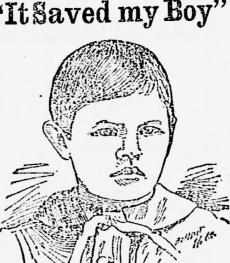

An Irish Compliment. An Irish gentleman visiting here said to an English officer, "Do you know Mr. X of -?" The officer disclaimed having that pleasure. "Ah, he is a very nice fellow and a good friend of mine. But he has been dead these six years. An, shure, you're very like him!" The officer said he had been compared to a good many things in the course of his lifetime, but never be fore to a 6 year-old corpse.-London Spec-

"It Saved my Boy" Patapsco Flouring Mills. THE "BISSELL CHILLED" PLOWS

ARE THE STANDARD PLOWS OF AMERICA. The fact that six years ago it was comparatively unknown in this territory, and that its annual sides with us now mount into the many hundreds, prove that in the field it has shown its superiority. As is well-known the patterns are the latest of Mr. T. M. Bissell, the original inventor of the Chilled Plow. We believe there is no implement which the farmer changes more unwillingly than his favorite plow, but in the interest of supplying the best, we continue cur offer, namely: Take a Bissell, put it in the field with any other chilled plow, and if our claims are not found true, which are that it is desirable in lightness of draft, ease of handling and quality of work done, combined with improved mechanical construction, return it to us and purchase money will be refunded.

All sizes, right and left-hand with their repairs, kept constantly in stock, and the prices are so reasonable as to justify substituting "Bissells" for all old-style plows.

THE DEERE "SHAKER" POTATO DIGGER. THROWS THE POTATOES OUT OF THE GROUND AND LEAVES THEM

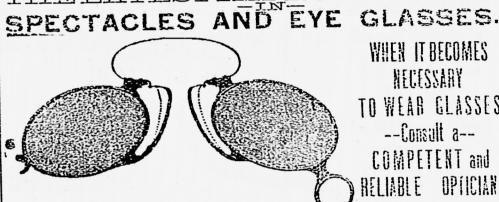

---CLEAN AND WHOLE .---Potato digging, at Lest, is tedious work; and when done either with the hoe or the plow the crop is unprofitable.

The 'Shaker' has a broad and perfectly flat blade which enters the hill under the potatocs, and allows them to slide up on the blade and fall on the rods or fingers. The Rods and Fingers are hinged to the front end, and are free to play up and down. The Flange Wheel in the rear lifts and drops these fingers; this motion causes a continuous shaking of the potatocs, knocking off the dit, which drops through between the roas, leaving the potatocs clean and free to roll off on top of the ground. The Weed Fender separates the weeds and vines and prepares the way for the shovel. The Digger has Metal Handles, well braced; all steel. PRICE $15.00.

PLOUGH REPAIRS of every description and at the most reasonable prices. PAINTS, OIL and GLASS, and all descriptions of FENCING WIKE. A fine line of CIDER MILLS.
