ELECTRIC RAILROAD NOTES.

Great Setivity On The Edmondson Avenue Line-Work at and Near Ellicott

Work on the terminus structures here of the Edmondson Avenue, Catonsville and Ellioott City Electric Railroad has presented a scene of great activity in the last few days, and there has been a complete transformation in the site on which the depot is to be located from that of a week ago. One of the large granite athe public road, on the Baltimore county | covered at once. side, has been finished, and the work of grading the deep cut through the properties of the late Judge Miller, Mr. Daniel R. McCauley and the Werner Brothforce of about fifty hands engaged on these sections. In order to obtain a substantial foundation for one of the piers on which the bridge leading to the depot is | tendered a screnade by the Honorton to be built, it was found necessary to tear band was seated on the upper porch of away one of the walls of the Patapsco | the hotel and discoursed many selections. Mills race and replace it with a stronger one. On this portion of the structure Mr. A. Weber, the contractor for the stone work, on Saturday evening put on a force of hands who worked continuously night and day, a part of the time in drenching showers, until Monday morning. They succeeded in raising the wall above the water-line of the race before the mills were ready to start. It is stated that the completion of the road to this point, in view of the few drawbacks encountered in the work of grading, will be much sooner than was at first anticipated.

The cut near the Judge Miller proper ty will be 47 feet deep and the grade from that point to the terminus at the river here will be 34 feet to the 100. This is considered a slight grade for an electric railroad as some of the grades of other roads are 12 feet to the 100.

As the digging of the road hed pro gresses intense interest among the people is excited On Sundays hundreds of hollow back of the Judge Miller property the road was likely to be interfered | contract. with by the branch whose course the line follows. Here floods were likely to overwhelm the line but the eye of the engineer at once suggested a remedy. Incourse a hill was cut down causing Mrs. Alverta II. Hughes, for $2,100. it to take a very short cut to the Patapsco River. The earth taken from this cut has been utilized in the flat near by to give the road hed its proper height.

The denuding of the land of the trees, the cuts in the hills, the building of the bridges, the changing of the course of the branch and the long stretches of already completed road bed have had the effect of completely changing the appearance of the country through which the line passes. The quiet shades of the unfrequented gorge reaching from near Westchester avenue to near the residence of Mr. David Van Order, now presents the appearance of a greatest care, solidity and utility being the aim at every point. The road bed in all respects will be as good as that of the B. and O. Arches are being constructed with especial care as if the company at some future day anticipated a heavy traffic. From the fact that the line is to be double track shows that it is the intention of the company to meet a greater want than that required between Ellicott City and Baltimore. It is the intention to traverse Howard county by the most practicable route in the direction of Washington city. The abutments on the other side of the river here are especially designed for a bridge of the proper grade to reach this side of the river near the store door of Messrs. S. J. Radciiffe & Son, which property, doubtless, in the near future, will be purchased by the company and utilized as a power and activity.

public thoroughfare, bustling with life

The valuation of land lying contiguous to the line has greatly increased since its construction began. Property that a few months ago could be bought for $100 an acre is now held at double and, in many instances treble, that amount. So it will be with land in Howard county when construction commences.

Paying an Election Bet. The residents of St. Denis on Monday night witnessed the settlement of an election bet in the form of a wheelbarrow ride. Dr. Costello, druggist of the town, agreed that if Lowndes was elected governor to wheel William Smithson in a wheelbarrow. The processsion was formed on Sutton avenue at 8.30 headed by a mule drawing a small hearse, followed by the Patapsco Band, twenty-five strong, and in the rear was Dr. Costello with his load of human freight. The parade was from Sutton avenue to the Republican Club headquarters, on Catonsville avenue, and return to the resi dence of Mr. Z. Householder, memberelect to the House of Delegates, where the members of the band and party were handsomely entertained by Mr. and Mrs.

Improvements at the Oella Mills. The extensive improvements at the Oella Cotton Mills of Messrs. William J. Dickey and Sons, near this place, are nearing completion. These improvements consist in part of an additional story to the middle mill, a large warehouse, five-double frame dwellings and the increase of the electric plant from 125 to 200 horse-power. The mills have for several years been lighted by electrictricity, which the managers have decided to use also as a motive power in the addition to the mills. The latest improved machinery for the manufacture of woolen goods will be placed in the addition to the mill. The improvements will necessitate the employment of an in-

B. & O. Railroad Shops Busy There is more work in the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad shops all along the line than at any time in three years. At Grafton the shops are running full time, and all the men for whom room can be found are employed. The Parkersburg shops have also been put on full, while those at Martinsburg and Keyser have been working full for two months. The demand for new cars has caused repair work to be deferred wherever possible. Local and Miscellaneous

State Senator Pinkney J. Bennett, of

Carroll County, who was on November 5 elected for his third term in the Senate, died suddenly Wednesday afternnon of hemorrhage. He had served eight years as a democratic Senator, and was ust about to begin service for four more when he was stricken down. His death was the result of a bad cold contracted during the campaign.

Senator Bennett was born on June 2, 1846, on his present home farm, Leigh Castle, near Dennings, Carroll county. Maryland and consequently was in his fiftieth year. He was a son of Benjamin V. and Margaret Clemson Bennet. All is life was spent in the county until the death of his father, when he removed to Westminster.

EFFECTS OF MR. BENNET'S DEATH. Section 13 of article 3 of the constituton makes it the duty of the the Governor to issue a warrant of election to supply the vacancy occasioned by the death His jaw bone was broken in several o Senator Bennet. The constitution requires ten day's notice of the special election to be given and the election las of 1890 requires the nomination papers of candidates to be filed with the super visors of elections in the county at least ten days before the election. Presumably, therefore, a special election will be held in Carroll county and if the warrant is issued shortly it can take place in time for the Senator elected to take hi seat at the beginning of the session in Januare. The next Senate prior to the death of Mr. Bennett was composed of fourteen democrats and twelve republi cans. The democrats, therefore, had a clear majority. It will be seen that much depends upon the political complexion of Mr. Bennett's successor, to be se lected at the coming special election Should he be a democrat, the Senate would remain unchanged, but if the re oublicans should carry the county the Senate would then be a tle. Mr. Bruce, of Baltimore city, would have the balance of power.

SUNDAY SCHOOL TIMES."-- If there is one plain duty for the average citizen, it is to obey the law; and if there is one paramount duty for public officials, it is to enforce the law." Thus writes the Hon. Theodore Roosevelt in The Sunday School Times of November 9. Mr. Roosevelt, in an article on "Observance of the Law," states in clear, vigorous language his ideas as to the duty of public officials, and of citizens in relation to public officials. He tells how the present Board of Police Commissioners have enforced certain laws in New York City, and how much of both sympathy and opposition they have met with in their work. Mr. Roosevelt wisely avoids passing upon the wisdom of these laws, but lays special emphasis on the point that "more important than even the question of what a law is, is the the question of the honest enforcement of the law."

FOOD AND MORALS.

RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN THE SPIR-ITUAL AND PHYSICAL.

Nutriments That Exert a Good or Bad Influence on the Soul or Body-Common Hyglenic Laws That Should Make Every Housewife a Moral Agent.

Few things in domestic life deserve more eareful study than the influence exercised by food on our health and our moral life, and it is to be feared few of these obtain less attention. Indeed, with an unfortunately large number of people the study of food is looked on as almost wicked, certainly derogatory, and the duty of "high thinking and low living" is insisted on ad nauseam.

Now that it is possible to attach too much importance to the question of "What shall we eat and what shall we drink?" no one will for a moment deny. At the same time it is probable that inattention to that very important question has far more to answer for. From the way some persons talk it would almost seem as if the physical body and the mental body were two entirely separate entities, absolutely independent the one of the other, though for practical purposes the greater and more important was, so to speak, imprisoned in the lower and least considerable portion. If this were true, no doubt much might be said in favor of the doctrine that our mental and moral powers are to be considered above our bodily ones. But as a matter of fact, plainly demonstrated by modern research, these two entities have. at present anyway, no separate existence, but, on the contrary, are inextricably bound up in one complex whole, the spiritual reacting on the bodily and the body in its turn influencing the spirit or soul, call it which you will, and it is to this reciprocal action that we owe the absolute importance of the food question. It is not too much to say that no ill fed man can be either thoroughly sane or intrinsically moral, and unluckily ill fed does not necessarily mean under or insufficiently fed, for in that case the remedy would be of the simplest, viz., a more generous supply of nutriment. Of course it may not be in the poor man's own power to obtain more food, but it would certainly make the task of those anxious to relieve him easier, as it would be plain what

Broadly speaking, all disease is originally preventible. Eliminate dirt and its spiritual prototype, sin, and the human race would be both healthy and happy. As, unfortunately, we can, however, get rid entirely of neither of these factors, we can only do our best to minimize their effects. and in this work, little as many appear to realize it, no one has more part than the house mother. Do not shirk the knowledge that such and such tendencies are, so to speak, in your blood, but face it, and make it your study to counteract them, if not in yourself, at least in your children. Now, in this work food is undoubtedly a firm ally. Take a baby, for instance, and see how entirely its moral condition depends on its bodily. A healthy, properly fed and tended baby is never a fretful, pecvish, little imp, always on the whine, and restless and uneasy just when it ought to be asleep. We hear a great deal of the improvement in the health of our girls, and attribute it to the increasing physiological knowledge of the day. As a matter of fact, of door exercise, fashionably considered a part of actual education by the well to do, which enables them to digest and assimilate their food better than in the old days, when a mile was looked on as an unusually long walk for a well bred gentlewoman, and battledoor and shuttlecock, or at most la grace, was the extent of their athletics. A man's diet, and more particularly a woman's, requires to be carefully adjusted to the manner of life. If hard out of door work is their lot, strong nitroge nous food is in our climate both suitable and necessary, but when a sedentary and confined life is inevitable, the diet should be, while nourishing enough to repair the waste of tissue, yet light and digestible enough not unduly to tax the already overworked internal organs.

At the same time it must be borne in mind that too much coddling is as harmful as neglect. From overzeal some housekeepers study the wholesomes so exclusively as to hopelessly weaken the digestive organs they desire to spare. There is a rage just now for condensing food, so to speak, by removing to the very uttermost all innutritious matter from our food stuffs, leaving as much as possible only what can be absorbed into the system. Now on the face of it this would appear wise plan, but as a matter of fact it is productive of great harm. We are formed to lead useful, industrious lives, bearing our fair share of the heat and burden of the day, not to be the coddled, idle inhabitants of a kind of intellectual hothouse. So we are given organs of various kinds fitted for the work we are to perform. But as it is a law of nature that unused powers should be taken away this coddling produces the very effect it is intended to prevent-i. e., by want of use it gradually withers away the digestion we do not seem to need, and then when we have to leave this hothouse atmosphere, as sooner or later we all must, we find ourselves unfitted for the struggle before us, and blame poor heredity for the evils brought on us our upbringers. To produce successful results our diet should not only be generous and wholesome, but it should be suitable to our manner of life, adapted to our constituour internal organs by turns, and sufficiently appetizing to tempt us to take the necessary and wholesome food required by our way of life. Unless it is so regulated we shall not be healthy, and in consequence shall probably be morose and gloomy from dyspepsia, irritable and uncertain from nervous prostration, and, in short, unfitted for the life before us long before we should be out of our first youth. There is another very serious point to be considered in regard to food. A well fed man is less liable to the morbid cravings that beset an unsatisfied digestion, and so is less predisposed to what some people call our national sin, drink, while a man weakened by indigestion and ill feeding is more apt to fall a prey to the hundred and Those acquainted with the awful epidemics of hot climates will tell you that immunity from such is due more to morale than to medicine, and that once a man's morals give way his health pretty surely follows it. Now, this is only another way of saying that a man who has led a wholesome, healthy life is less apt to let his nerves run away with him, and, without begging the question, it may unhesitatingly be asserted that "nerves" is only another word for digestion-or indigestion, as the case may be!-London Queen. PUBLIC SALES. On Monday, December 2, by Harry M. Benzinger, mortgage salcof a farm of. 565 acres in the Second district of Howard county, W. B.
