THE MUSIC GRINDER'S AMBITION.

He Wants to Earn Enough to Enable Him to Live in Italy.

There are 65 street pianos and two or three large hand organs on the streets of Washington each day, and it is estimated that about $750 is paid each week by residents of the city for the privilege of being entertained. All the instruments are owned and managed by Italians, who travel, as a general rule, in pairs. These people reside in two portions of the city. One small colony is situated south of the Capitol, and the other, which is the larger, on D, between Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets. It is at these places that the general low class Italian life can be seen. The latter locality has been named "Little Italy." There are only eight or ten habitable houses on the square, but in these live about 100 Italians. Many of them are engaged in pursuits other than that of "grinding" and a few sell fruit and perform manual labor on the streets.

The business of an Italian street piano player is remunerative. It is a hard man's job, indeed, who is unable to glean at least $1.50 a day, and the receipts often reach $2.00 to $3.00 a day. Many of them taking into consideration the fact that the pianos are procurable at a comparatively low price—$15—and that it is necessary to purchase a new one every year, is very profitable, especially to a class of persons who, in their native country, consider themselves well to do if they are able to earn 40 or 50 cents a day.

The Italian organ grinder is an interesting being. He is industrious, enterprising, frugal and, above all, law abiding. His life is simple and a remarkable degree, but does not reach the point of denial. He is very little given to dissipation, and his earnings, for the most part, are placed away safely, where they may be used in the future. He is at all times looking for the "main chance," and never loses an opportunity to earn the small "jack" of money.

Germany, Switzerland and France, owing to their close proximity to Italy, are the most attractive countries to emigrants from Italy. Any one who wishes to go by no means loses his share of them.

A remarkably large number of them land on the shores of this country, but 50 per cent do not remain. Their ulterior object is to amass a sufficiently large amount of money to enable them to return to Italy and spend the remainder of their life in the United States by no means loses its share of them.

This form of life is especially attractive to the musician's laborer, who begins quite early and ends late. At 8 o'clock they are upon the street, all traveling in different directions. The instruments are not housed until 9 at night, when the time limit prescribed by law expires. During this period they are in the habit of resting. The music is consumed in wheeling the pianos from place to place, which is no easy task.

There is an agreement between the organ grinder and the piano player, by which each one is to be allotted a certain territory, and the pianist is warned not to trespass upon the precincts of his neighbor. Occasionally an infraction of this understanding occurs. The down town districts, however, are free from restriction, and each piano player is allowed to play on any street he desires. There are no regular rates, but a piano player generally warrants the playing of about ten selections.—Washington Star.

Glasgow and the Ticket Clerk.
Here is an anecdote of the late Lord Glasgow. His lordship was traveling by rail and took a "Glasgow" to the looking glass for a ticket to Glasgow.
"Put your name on it," said the youth.
And Lord Glasgow looked at it as requested and handed the note back.
"Here! If you did 'Glasgow' it was not where you're going to!"
We should not print Lord Glasgow's reply.—Parson's Weekly.

KNABE

GRAND SQUARE AND UPRIGHT PIANO FORTES.

These instruments have been before the public for nearly fifty years, and upon their trial it is found that they are superior to any other piano in the world. It is about 8 inches in length, has a fine ordinary bowing knife blade and has a fine tone and a soft silver finish.

On one side of the handle is a silver heart, while on the other there is a large silver star. Small stars also adorn the handle. On a silver bar the name of Jesse Knabe appears, beautifully engraved.

The knife is incased in a horn scabbard that is mounted with solid silver. The second case the dexterated $10. It would take several like amounts to buy it from McClure.

Ex-Sheriff Martin Aguirre, once carried the shagreened instrument. It was secured here from Mrs. Samuel, mother of the James boys, who at one time resided here, and who perhaps still resides here.—Los Angeles Record.

Look Too Much For Granted.

"Have you sold that unruly horse that you had?"
"Yes, I did!"
"How did you manage it?"
"Told the fellow that my mother-in-law could drive him anywhere."
"And—no—no?"
"Exactly. He had never seen her!"—Chicago Record.

Pelantny, in the common conception of the word, means an absurd ostentation of learning and stiffness of philosophy, proceeding from a mislaid knowledge of books and a total ignorance of men.—MacKenzie.

Louis the Great paid so much attention to his manners that he took a dancing lesson every day but Sunday for 23 years.

GRAPE PAPER DECORATIONS.

Wonderfully Artistic Effects Wrought From the Pliable Fabric.

Very few people, I fancy, writes Ellicott City in the Ladies Home Journal, have ever seen a paper party carried out in all its details, but those who have are unanimous in their expressions of delight and surprise at the wonderful artistic effects which have been produced with that pliable material, grape paper, and the best part is the comparatively small expense and infinite variety of changes in color combinations.

First to be considered is the room, and perhaps a description of one which I helped decorate not long ago will suggest more ideas than I could give otherwise. It was a large room in a clubhouse, some 30 by 40 feet, with ceiling 10 feet high, crossed and divided by big oak beams. On one side were three window seats, and opposite a big fireplace, with window seats on either side. Something entirely different from the paper, was used for the window seats, and this was low in the room. Morning glories in pink, purple and crimson made in vines, with large leaves of the same paper, were suspended before each of the window seats. Long curtains of morning glory vines, made by hanging lengths of the vines close together across the opening from the top of the window, and the window seats were made to fall gracefully on either side. The beams were all hung with garlands of vines across and all around the room. The doorway at either end of the room were hung with curtains, and long vines trailed down carelessly over the picture.

The Gothic arches over the fireplace were outlined with the same paper, and was illuminated by a big circle of electric lights, and from this to each corner hung a long vine of lights. These were wound and hung with vines, and the vines were shaded with a big morning glory, as were also the lights on the side chandeliers about the room. The fireplace was filled with palms and ferns, and the window seats were hung with a big bower of morning glories. Of course it took quantities of vines, but many hands made light work.

germs!

It is a well-known fact that disease germs are everywhere; in our food, the air, and especially in the water, where they live and grow and multiply.

GENEVA LITHIA WATER is perfectly pure, contains no organic matter, and by taking only such pure water into the system we keep out much of that usual germ-laden element—ordinary water—and in addition, by the action of the tissue salts of Geneva Water, we strengthen it to withstand the attacks of these little animals.

The action of Geneva is to increase the waste products thereby allowing nature more rapidly to rebuild our entire system.
