Herald. Washington's Birthday at the Confederate Soldiers' Home. Washington's Birthday was one of the most pleasant days the old soldfer has had for a long time at the Home. The ladies of the Society who look after his wants had provided an appetizing menu for the day, which consisted of turkey, cranberries, sauerkraut, sweet potatoes, lima beans and other dishes, together with tropical fruits. The members showed their high appreciation of the kindness of the Society by the hearty manner in which they dined. The dinner cheered the inner man, but the boys from McDonogh school cheered the soul The boys, equipped in their uniforms, came down to pay the old yeterans a visit and also to meet their friends. The large hall had been given them for the day, and these boys, meeting their mothers, sisters and other friends, created a scene that made more than one old grayheaded veteran wish "I was a boy again." What could be more beautiful than to see these widowed mothers press to their hearts their orphan boys. What a scene! The tears of love trickling down the cheeks of the mother, and then the expression of hopes, as the boy threw his arms around his mother's neck and kissed those cheeks over and over again. There the great magician many are new and was not a man who witnessed this meeting whose heart did not tingle with joy as he was carried back to the days of his boyhood. The boys and their friends about two hundred-the names of a hundred and sixty five appearing on the visitors' register. Everything the members of the Home could do was done by them, to make them have a good time. Their rooms were all thrown open to them and Capt. C. W. Dorsey took them in charge. Their friends had brought out great baskets of good things to give them an enjoyable feast. Superintendent Pope had coffee made for them and their dinner was as much enjoyed as that of the old soldiers'. After dining Capt. He lost several weeks from his office when his time was worth from fifty to a hundred dollars a day, and obtained no relief, but was promptly cured by using a remedy prescribed by Mr. Lilly, who kept the we'l-known umbrella store, No. 65 Court Street, Boston. In answer to inquries we learn from his sons who keep the same store, that it is an infusion of the common herb called "Fire Weed," made about the color of coffee and a small cupful taken three times a day before meals and on retiring, and that some Boston druggists keep it. Week March 7th-First Appearance as Master of Magical Art of Adonis Dixey, In a Brilliant Entertainment of Legerdemain.

The advent of Henry E. Dixey as magician has proved notably successful. His debut as a professional magician was madeduring the first of the season in New York with flattering result the press and public both uniting in emphatic approbation. Mr. Dixey comes to Baltimore with all the advantages of an experienced exponent of the Black Art: he has for many years been an adept in sleight of hand tricks, etc., and at the death of Hermann was offered his magical equipment. The programme is said to be vastly entertaining and original while including some of the tricks of surprising. The illusions are fine. In fact every feature of the performance is exceptional of its kind. Dixey is a royal entertainer, highly gifted as a wit, a musician and a comedian. He comes endowed with every personal advantage and it is not exaggeration to say that the mantle of the great Herrmann has fallen on the shoulders of the inimitable comedian. Since his long New York run Dixey has been en tour with the most pleasing success. His engagement in Baltimore will be limited to one week only, commencing Monday, March 7th matinees Wednerday and Saturday. Ad mission 25 and 50 cts.
