TAKE THE LEAD.

The first gun of the season has been fired, and the first victory won. This time the victory was not over the Spanish fleet in far off Manila, but right at home and over the cheap trashy machines that are now flooding the market.
We started the first "Bonnie" Binders of the season in South Carolina on May 30th, the day we do honor to the defenders of our great and glorious country. The reports we get from these machines are more than satisfactory.

Our competitors admit the worth of our machine by offering theirs for less money. The fact that the "Bonnie" is constantly growing in popularity has spread consternation in their ranks, and they now seem to fear that they cannot get rid of their Cheap John machines even at low prices.

We are proud of the fact that we are finding a great many people who want the best even if it does not because it does cost a trifle more. The "Bonnie" is the cheapest binder on the market today, not because it wife gracefully surrenders when she sees our can be bought for less money, but because the man who buys it gets more durability and more satisfaction out of it than is possible with any other machine on the market.

We attach copies of two letters just received from parties who are using "Bonnies" this year:

ANDERSON, S. C., May 30, 1898.

THE JOHNSON HARVESTER CO., Harrisburg, Pa.,

Dear Sirs:—I spent some time to-day in watching and operating a "Bonnie" binder in the field. Am delighted with the machine. It excells anything in the way of a binder I ever saw. Its draft is light, it is easily operated and does perfect work in light as well as in heavy grain.

I believe the "Bonnie" is all you claim it to be and that it is the solution of the light binder problem.

Respectfully yours,

N. B. S

THE JOHNSTON HARVESTER CO.,

Dear Sir :— The "Bonnie" purchased of your agents, the Sullivan Hardware Co., was started in my field to-day and it works satisfactorily in every way. The grain was short and thin but it saved it all, not wasting any in the elevators, and making nice shapely bundles. It is light of draft and easily handled, and although I had three mules hitched to the machine I am satisfied two can pull it over any ground I have.

Yours truly,

J. T. McCOUN.

THE NATIONAL ENSIGN DURING A NAVAL BATTLE.

man-of-war who by his action in pulling the Englishman escaped. down the enemy's flag during a battle gained a victory for his commander. The tain made himself a great deal of trouble story illustrates the value of the national flag in a naval action and how much depends upon the sailors seeing it flying from the masthead above them. It was just at the beginning of a battle between two to the top of the mast and nail the flag ships that the cabin boy, who had never there. The American ship proved the betbeen in a fight, asked one of the sailors ter, and before long the Englishman wanthow long it would take the enemy to surhave to do to beat the other.

"Do you see that?" asked the sailor, pointing to the flag which was flying from the masthead of the other ship. "As long as that is flying the other fellows will fight, but when it comes down they will stop and their ship will surrender."

The cabin boy was too small to fight, for his captain. During the battle when the ships were lashed together he crawled on board the enemy's vessel and while the sailors were busy fighting climbed the rope ladder which ran up the mast, and, pulling the flag from its place, wrapped it around his body and carried it back to his own ship. The sailors were fighting bravely until one, looking up and seeing that the flag was gone, cried out to his companions that the captain had pulled down the flag and there was no use fighting longer. The men threw down their arms, and the mistake was not discovered until it was too late, for the cabin boy's comrades had seized the ship. The flag of his country is what every sailor and soldier throughout the world fights for during a battle. When the flag is gone, they lose heart and give up easily. Some of the bravest deeds have been in defense of the flag and to get it back again when the enemy has captured it. When a ship goes into battle, the national flag is run up to the masthead, the highest point on the vessel, where it flies until the engagement is over. Sometimes when the other ship is the stronger or its sailors fight better and the captain sees that he is beaten he pulls down his flag to show the enemy that he has had enough and wants to surrender. This act is called "striking the colors." It is a usual thing to run up a white flag in the place of the one which has been hauled down, but often the simple act of striking the colors is enough to end a battle. So long as the captain of a ship sees any flag except a white one flying from the enemy's vessel he will continue to fire upon it, for it is a sign that the sailors have not given up and are ready to fight longer. Sometimes during a naval battle the ropes which hold the flag are shot away, but in such cases there are always some brave sailors who will climb the mast and put another in its place. During the Revolutionary war, when the ship commanded by Paul Jones was fighting an English vessel, the American flag was shot away and fell overboard into the water. One of the sailors who saw it fall jumped after it, and, although he was wounded, swam with it back to the ship, when it was fastened to the top of the mast again. When the flag went overboard, the Englishmen began to cheer, for they thought that Paul

Jones had surrendered, but when they saw it flying from the masthead once more they changed their minds and finally surrendered themselves. The action of the wounded sailor in jumping into the water to rescue the flag made his companions fight all the harder. Every one who has read American history knows about the battle of Lake Erie and of how Commodore Perry carried the flag from his sinking ship and hoisted it upon another. When the English captain saw Perry going in a rowboat from the sinking ship with the flag thrown over his shoulder, he ordered his sailors to sink the that their flag was lost they would lose heart and surrender, and, as he expected, when they saw the flag flying again they worked harder and finally beat his ships. A ship going into action carries several flags—the national colors, which are hoisted in the most prominent place; the union messages from one ship to another. When a squadron of vessels under an admiral goes into a fight, the flagship flies besides the other flags mentioned one which denotes the rank of that efficer. In the old days, when war vessels were made of wood and had three masts, most of the flags were holsted to the top of these masts. Nowadays, however, many of our fighting ships have only one mast, and several flags may be heisted upon that, but the stars

Just before the battle he ordered a sailer to climb ed to surrender, but when he wished to render and what his own ship would pull down his flag he couldn't. The sailors were busy fighting, so the captain himself had to climb the mast and tear down the British ensign.

There have been instances where the commander of a ship nailed his flag to the mast and left it flying there until the vessel sank. The last object which appeared above the water was the colors, and even but he made up his mind to get the flag | the victorious enemy cheered the sinking flag.-New York Sun.

WONDERFUL MINING TOOLS.

James Bray, an Expert Blacksmith, Has a Unique Collection. What probably constitutes the handcomest and most original set of miner's tools in the city, if not in the west, is in the possession of James Bray, who is an expert blacksmith, as his work shows, made each article of the collection himself and were he anything but the modest man he is the praise which every exhibition of the tools evokes would turn his head to an inordinate and dangerous de-

The tools are seven in number, and consist of three pole picks of the kind used by experts to break off samples of rock and four candlesticks. The eyes and straps of two of the picks are forged from one piece of steel, and the manner in which the wood of the handles is worked into the straps is quite a puzzle. Particularly is this the case with one of the picks, which has four straps and shows the same number of apparent divisions in the handle. One mining man after carefully examining the tool gave it as his opinion that the wood was simply inlaid. The prompt offer of Mr. Bray to bet $50 that only one piece of wood constituted the handle and the straps were forged around and his willingness to allow the tool to be cut to pieces in proof of his assertion caused the other man to change his mind, and he declined

As much ingenuity as is displayed in the manufacture of the picks, it is completely overshadowed by that manifested in the composition of the candlesticks. One of them is made so that it can be take en apart and fits into the end of the handle of one of the picks. Another has a regular pistol grip in place of the ordinary loop or ring and can be closed up something after the manner of a clasp knife. A cover working with a spring fits over the socket into which the candle is inserted and is so arranged that as soon as the candle is consumed even with the top of the socket the cover flies forward and extinguishes the

In addition Mr. Bray has still another folding candlestick made to be carried in the pocket. It is so arranged that either the hook or spike can be used, or both can be folded back and the stick carried in the hand. Still another stick, which is covered by a patent, has a knife attachment connected with the hook for cutting fuse, an arrangement for splitting the fuse and ripping open the paper that covers giant powder, in case it is found necessary to crowd it into a small hole, and also an appliance for crimping the cap. This stick is also provided with the automatic extinguisher.

So far as novelty is concerned the gem of the collection perhaps is a folding stick with a horn handle and is called "the puzzler." A puzzler it is indeed, for as yet nobody has been found able to open it, although, according to Mr. Bray, fully 9,000 people have attempted the feat. Two miniature copies of the first mentioned folding stick complete the collection. One of them when closed is less than one inch in length and can be worn as a watch charm, while the other is a trifle larger and heavier.—Anaconda Standard.

Quite a "Character."

Here is a "character" given to a servant on leaving her last situation: "The bearer has been in my house a year, less 11 months. During this time she has shown herself diligent at the house door, frugal in work, mindful of herself, prompt in excuses, friendly toward men, faithful to was out of the way."-London Tit-Bits.

It Was Started. The largest tobacco pipe factory in the near Pamplin City. It had been known the states that there existed clay in that county well adapted to the manufacture of tobacco pipes, but the industry was carried on in the most desultory way. Sometimes a negro at odd times would fashlon a few rude pipes and sell them in the neighborhood, generally at the country store. But at the close of the war the whites urned their attention to the clay deposite

The war had swept away everything. The implements with which the pipes were manufactured were simple and rude, and it must be confessed that the article which they fabricated did not bear the closest possible resemblance to those turned out by the thousand today.

The pipes were sold to local merchants, who shipped them to wholesale dealers in northern cities, who sold them to retailers throughout the country. And now comes the part of the story that sounds rather romantic, though it is every word true.

Among the retail dealers who purchased a lot of these poor men's pipes was a groery man in a little town in Ohio. He sold them at from 2 to 5 cents aplece and found them very popular. Among those who purchased one was a wealthy citizen of the town, who was led to do so by a less wealthy neighbor, who had found them sweet smokers. The capitalist was delighted. He smoked nothing else for some time and finally inquired of the grocery man as to where the pipes were made. The latter could only give the name of the wholesale dealer from whom he had purchased, but from him the gentleman learned that the pipes were made from a clay bank in the county of Appomattox, in Virginia.

The gentleman saw that the pipes were of very rude construction. He saw also that were proper machinery used they could be turned out with great rapidity interested, and finally his mind dwelt so much upon the subject that he came over to Virginia and to the little town of Appomattox. He went at once to the store of the dealer in pipes and was not long in finding that the best were made at a bank about eight miles away, at what is now Pamplin City.

The rest is soon told. The land was purchased for a small sum, buildings erected, the latest machinery installed and soon the kilns were smoking.—Richmond Dis-

AARON BURR'S CHECK.

It Is Probably the Oldest Bank Check In Existence. In the Marion National bank, in this city, the following check is on exhibition:

Cashier of the Bank: Pay to Mr. John Nielson or bearer one hun-Pay to Mr. John Mielson of dred and fifty pounds in paper.
New York, the second day of June, 1798.

now superintendent of the national ceme tery near Lebanon, held a command in Sherman's army. When the army was at Allatoona Pass, Colonel Towne sent a detail of Union soldiers under the command of a lieutenant to the Etowah river on a foraging expedition. Among other places visited by the detachment of soldiers was the plantation of Governor Brown. The residence was deserted, and in searching the house one of the soldiers found the original of the above check in Governor Brown's library. He took it with him and on his return to camp presented it to Colonel Towne, who carried it on his person during the rest of the war. When peace was proclaimed and Colonel Towns returned to Wisconsin, he presented the Burr check to the cashier of the bank in his native town, who had it framed and hung in the bank as a valuable relic. Subsequently photographic copies of the check were taken. Colonel Towne was given one of those copies, and he presented it to Cashier J. M. Knott of the Marion National bank. The original is still on exhibition in the Wisconsin bank.

Doubtless it is the oldest bank check in existence, and the fact that the drawer was a national celebrity during his life makes it a very rare and valuable relic .-Lebanon Falcon
