The scheme was introduced by Mr. Harman last September for the purpose of creating an interest in geography outside of the text-book and to help cultivate an acquaintance with the 'cyclopedias | son and Mr. Highlands. and reference books in general. No prize was offered nor did the pupils suspect that any particular notice would be taken of their efforts until February 1st, when Mr. II. requested that each pupil make out his list and enclose it in a sealed envelope, with his name on the outside, all to be opened at some future time in the presence of a school official and the number of isthmuses sprung as a L irprise on the pupils of the other schools in the county. A delay of two weeks was requested and of course granted. It was found at the end of that time that on comparing notes with each other all but seven of the pupils had dropped out of the contest, owing to the comparatively small number they had found.

The following are the names of the pupils handing in lists with the number found by each: Marrion V. Bailliere, 19; J. Clifton Harman, 17; Wm. Frank Kirkwood, 17; J. Leonard Cooley, 17; C. Alfred Shreeve, 12; Wootten Mercier, 14; Caleb D. Rogers 9. The prize, a handsome historical atlas of the world, was awarded to Master Bailliere.

The Tourney at Glenwood.

The first of a series of tourneys to be held in Howard county during the season took place at Glenwood, Fourth district, on the Fourth. There was a large atgant order. A feature of the tourney was the distinctive costumes of the knights, marshals and heralds. There were two sets of knights-professionals and amateurs—and double sets of prizes awarded the successful riders. Col. Jos. W. Berret, of Carroll county, was chief marshal, with Marshall T. Warfield as assistant. The heralds were Messrs. Harry S. Hobbs and W. Charles Ham-The judges were Messrs. Gustavus Warfield, A. P. Forsythe, Clinton G. Morgan, John T. Ridgely, Thomas O. Warfield, Asbury P. Hobbs, J. Stephen Tracey, J. D. Alcock and John M. Delashmutt. The professional knights were Messrs. Merceron, Shirley, Bell, Baseman, Crook and Kessler. The first prize was won by Mr. Merceron, who also had the honor of crowning the Burke, and the coronation address by Mr. J. Malcolm Dorsey, both of the Ellinights was delivered by Mr. M cott City bar. Dancing was made the feature of the evening.

Serious Fracas at Gray's, Joseph Cavey, son of William Cavey, of Gray's, was frightfully cut about the head Saturday night near Gray's factory. In company with his brother, William Cavey, Jr., and the latter's wife, all of them riding in a wagon, he had an encounter on the road, where a disturbance had been started by four or five men. The men, it is said, had attacked William Keith at his home, and the Caveys took a hand to protect Keith, as well as his little son, Robert, who, it seems, had been thrown from a bicycle by one of the men. There was a general knockdown all around after the Messrs. Cavey interfered, and Joseph Cavey was cut. Dr. Owings dressed the man's wounds, which numbered twenty-five gashes. Officer Cramblitt, of Baltimore county, Sunday made an investigation of the affair which resulted in the arrest of Gus Doughty and William Gallinger. On account of defective commitments the above parties were released under a writ of habeas corpus, but re-arrested on Thursday.

Pleasant Straw-ride. On Wednesday evening, July 6th, a party of young ladies and gentlemen assembled at the residence of Rev. E. E. Shipley, near Ivory, this county, for a atraw ride. Before leaving the party was served supper, and after the ride refreshments were served. The wagon was drawn by four large horses covered with bells, which gave abundance of noise for the occasion. The team was in charge of Mesars. John Dorsey and George Clark. Among those present were: Mrs. L. M. Shipley, chaperone; Misses Ethel and Elsie A. Shipley, Lollie J. and Fannie I. Jones, Edith Slack, of Baltimore, and Rena Ridgely, Messrs. Morris and Claude Stier, G. W. Robb, Edgar C. Powers, S. Wright Davis, of Washington; Stanley D. Shipley, Orman D. Maxwell, and Charles H. plicity in the Lynching of Henson The preliminary hearing of Elmer Wiles, a young man residing on Granite Hill, this city, charged with attempting to fire the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad station here on the night of June 13, was | D. C. The ceremony was performed by held before Justice Melvin on the 1st inst. | Rev. J. H. McDonald, sentor pastor of Chief of Police James E. Vansant testified that Wiles had made a statement to State's Attorney Joseph D. McGuire, in ing the names of his accomplices. Ilis statement was alleged to have been substantially as follows: That he, Cal Ray and Walter Clark, upon the suggestion of Ray, procured a lot of oiled cotton waste from a freight car, and went to the depot office, from the window of which Ray broke a pane of glass, through which he put his hand and lifted the latch; that Ray then entered the building, and, placing the cotton on the floor, struck a match to light it. He then ran away, going to his home. Clark, who is also held in jail | reside in Washington and be at home to on the same charge, gave similar testimony, adding that he witnessed the lightning of the cotton by Ray, who afterwards left the building by way of the window, which he then closed. When the alarm of tire was made all three rushed to the scene, and feigned to assist in extinguishing the flames. Wiles was held for the action of the grand jury in the sum of $2,000. TRIALS OF CAL. B. RAY.

Two other cases of a grave criminal nature were disposed of at the court-house Wednesday. Both were against Cal. B. Ray, one on the charge of attempting to Ohio Railroad Company, and the other on the graver charge of being a participant in the lynghing of the colored with the lynghing wi burn the local office of the Baltimore and in the lynching of the colored man, Jacob Henson, Jr., here, in April, 1895. On the former charge the hearing was before Justice James F. Melvin. Ray had no counsel, but conducted his own case in a most adroit and intelligent manner, at times so cornering his opposing witnesses on cross-examination as to elicit denisls in several statements. Several transactions in which it was endeavored to show Ray's connection with the fire were related by Chief Detective John Lloyd, of the B. & O. Mr. Francis Heine, local ticket agent of the railroad, testified as to the nature of the burning, and the damage done to the office. Detective Hugh McCaul gave evidence as to his working up the case against Ray. He was subjected to a rigid cross-examina tion by Ray, during which there were several verbal tilts between the two. At one time when Ray pressed the witness to make a retraction of a statement without success, he remarked to the detective: "If you go to Heaven, I do not want "I don't expect to meet to go there." you there," said McCaul. He was a native of this county, but had mercantile business in Savannah, Ga., having been forced, however, by il health to relinquish active work about made his home with his brother in Howard county. He was a half brother of the late Richard G. and Patrick H Macgill and a nephew of the late C. Gambrill, head of the well-known C. A Gambrill, Manufacturing Company. He was a bachelor. The funeral took place on Monday from his late home at 4 P. M., Rev. Mr Paynter, of the Episcopal Church, officiating. Interment was made at St. John's cemetery. The pall-bearers were: Messrs E. Turner James, John L. Clark, Samuel Whipps, Wm. J. Harding, Wm. Dixon, Hammond Carr, and George

The funeral of Mr. John Thomas Beale Dorsey, whose death was briefly announced in THE TIMES last week, took place Friday afternoon from the Confederate Home at Pikesville, and the interment was at Loudon Park. Mr. Dorsey was the son of the late Judge Thomas B. Dorsey, the well-known Maryland jurist, and was in the 77th year of his age. He served in the Southern Confederacy during the Civil War in the war department at Richmond. He was a leading member of the bar, practicing his profession until a few years ago he became incapacitated from ill-health. He had been at the Confederate Home about three years. He was a brother of the late Samuel Dorsey, whose wife, Miss Sarah Ellis, of Mississippi, at the death of her husband, gave his property to Jefferson Davis, including Mr Davis' homestead, Beauvoir." John T. B. Dorsey was marled three times. His first wife was Miss Sarah M. Harrison, and his second wife was Miss Mary Cambell Harris. His third wife was a daughter of the late Jas. M. Mason, of Virginia, of Mason-Slidell fame. He was at one time the owner of a heautiful piece of property near Ellicott City, which now belongs to Senator John G. Rogers, and is known as "Woodlawn." He was at one time a member of the legislature, and was State's attorney of Howard county for a number of years. In 1867 he was a candidate for the circuit judgeship, hut was defeated by Judge Edward Hammond, and was also defeated for the same position in 1882 by Judge

A FEW MORE WORDS ABOUT THE LATE MR. GEORGE PATTERSON.

He was a gracious and generous host his establishment being modeled some what upon the plan of that of an old English Squire, one of a prominent county family. After breakfast he was wont to say, "I am going over the farm and will be glad to have you join me, but if you prefer to drive about the country there are vehicles for you, or guns for

It was a positive intellectual treat to go with him and hear the history of the farm he had "created," for he would tell the story of every field, and I can believe that each acre of the entire estate had a place in his affection almost similar and equal to that of a father for his child.

He would tell of its early condition, how it approached little by little to the high state of cultivation and productive ness it had reached at the time he spoke, what he had done to and for it, what errors, if any, he had made, and how rem edied. I am sure that all but the most confirmed crank upon the subject of the delights and benefits of a city life would have been converted to an enthusiastic lover of farming had they listened attentively and intelligently, for he spoke can amore, his slight drawl adding zest to the narrative. He told of the rise in importance in the world of stock raisers, of his herd of Devons and mentioned with pardonable pride a visit made to him by the son of great English breeder of Devons, for the purpose of inspecting it, and who pronounced it equal, if not superior, to any Prince Albert, the husband of Queen Vic-New blood was added every three years to all his stock, and even that of his turkeys and chickens was changed accord ing to the same rule. He used to dwell upon the merits of a in Pennsylvania, traversed Maryland and ended in Virginia, and he considered the part of his farm through which it went the best of the entire property. When his guests and he assembled be fore dinner, the latter were refreshed with "old rye," put in demijohns by his Walter father in 1814. Just before dinner he was accustomed to say, "What wine will you have? I can give you Sherry, Madeira or Port," (he usually drank Port or London | Porter) "but remember you can't have a Madeira was about sixty years old at the time of which I write, and had made two trips around Cape Horn, a sea voyage being then supposed to ripen and improve wine. I remember upon one occasion a nota ble dinner party when the bill of fare consisted in part of a noble Baron of Devon beef, a luscious Berkshire ham, a twenty-four pounds caponed turkey, and a plum pudding of generous proportions, together with the wines I have mentioned The party was a merry one; there was no lack of wit and joyous conversation Among the guests were C. H. A ---, man of infinite jest and wit; H. D. G. C-, a prince of good fellows and a noted club man; W. H. N-, one of Baltimore's most distinguished lawyers; H. W-, a solid, well-informed business man and a genial companion, and Prof. N. R. Smith, the world renowned surgeon. I was much the youngest, and am the only one of the party left.

It was upon that occasion when he sud-It was upon that occasion when he suddenly said of myself, "that R—is a very honest man." I wondered why he had last Monday at his late home, after a such a compliment. singled me out for such a compliment and thoughtlessly asked, "why do you say that, Mr. Patterson?" I was sorry that I had spoken when the reply came, "you can trust him to drink in the dark." There was a member of the household. as he deserved to be called, Adam, a huge Maltese cat, to whom each guest was introduced, and the introduction was always accompanied by "be sure you notice him or he'll resent the slight with his

Mr. l'atterson's conversation contained a veritable mine of information touching farming, the story of Baltimore in its early days, and politics, and one could only wonder how fully his mind had been stored and answered to each demand upon it, when he came to recall the incidents of his life. The following incident will fairly illustrate Mr. Patterson's methods of aiding those in need. A man asked him for an order upon his miller for flour and meal. "I never give them," he said, "but take this," handing him some money, "and spent a greater portion of his life in the buy from him what you need, and if you want work I'll give it to you." The man gratefully accepted the offer and was told to go upon a certain portion of the woodthree years ago since which time he had land, clear it, pile up the cord wood and he'd be paid. The quantity cut and piled | the Fourth with Mr. Barnes' parents, was large. The time occupied in the work showed industry upon the part of the man, and then Mr. Patterson, after paying in full the price agreed upon, said now haul it away and you may have it." In Baltimore he was a charming comanion, for in his walks and talks about the old parts of the city, those about Gay. Lombard, Pratt, South and neighboring streets, he would entertain us by the hour with anecdotes of the dwellers there in the days of his youth, of the births, marriages, deaths, and may be now and then he'd tell some gossip or a bit of scandal in his dry way, with many merry twinkle of his eyes and quiet smile After the war, in 1864 5, a gentleman from Virginia, a Contederate soldier, was taken to see him, was kindly received and cordially entertained. evening his guest happened to mention his reduced circumstances, reduced by the war, of his desolate home, fences burned and outhouses destroyed, of a upon him, &c. He told it in a manly way, not at all despondent, and eviden; ly not seeking or expecting any special sympathy. Mr. Patterson listened in silence. The next morning after breakfast he said, abruptly as he frequently spoke, "Mr. - you've been here long enough, you must go home." The Virginian unused to his manner seemed somewhat nettled and replied "I'll go then today." "You had better do so," said Mr. Patterson, but before you go I closing out their stock. want you to go about the farm with me to select some things for I intend to start you upon your farm again. He gave him farming implements, number of Devons, a lot of sheep, some Berkshire hogs, horses, &c., &c., saying "when you are ready for them let me know and I'll send them to you free of charges. The gentleman was overwhelmed by gratitude and with tears rolling down his cheeks could scarcely speak his thanks. We often have heard of 'Stonewall Jackson's way." This was George Patterson's way.

He was a singularly just man. Upon one occasion he sold two Devon helfers to a breeder in Connecticut; they arrived safely and a check for them came in due season. A short time thereafter a letter was received by him from the buyer, saying that the helfers were dead, and upon examination their stomachs showed signs of congestion. Immediately Mr. Patter-
