THOSE TERRIBLE EYES. Senator Case Could Almost Annihilate

Man With a Look. Giant heads, bodies and brains were Webster and Casa. All the strength of New Hampshire granite was concentrated in those two sons. To look upon them made the ordinary man feel small. Wonderful eyes they possessed, and men have been known to shiver with dread when one or the other allowed his glance to fall upon them. Cass could look through a stranger in a way to make his brain burn and his knees knock together. One searching stare seemed to destroy all mentality

No man dared take liberties with Cass. In 1846 the proprietor of the National hotel in Washington was a man who so closely resembled the great senator from Michigan that he was often mistaken for him. An old friend, returning from a journey, entered the lobby, and, seeing him leaning against the desk, slipped up behind and hit him a terrific whack on the shoulder, saying cheerly and simultaneously: "Hello, old man! Here I am back HORSE COLLARS der, and, without waiting for a greeting, surprised him with: "See here, old fellow, Again the great senator from Michigan straightened up his six feet three, again he turned his bloodshot eyes, again he looked and again the victim fled. TIPSY MEN DANGEROUS.

A Story of the Trouble Involved In Trying to Help One of Them. Three or four men were spinning yarns in one of the parlers of the Charleston hotel, and the conversation drifted around to experiences with drunken men. 'You've no idea how dangerous it is to have any dealings with a drunken man whom you may meet on the street," said one of the party. "A man sometimes gets into trouble that may last him a lifetime. I recall an experience of a friend of mine that will serve to illustrate the "One Sunday morning several years ngo we were sitting in his room in New Orleans watching the people coming home from church when suddenly there staggered into sight a block away a well dressed man, evidently much the worse for what he had taken. We watched him as he worked his way up the street, clinging to the palings and taking up all the pave-ment he could. We were somewhat in-clined to consider it a joke, until he came to the opposite corner and paused in despair at the prospect of crossing. The crossing was none too well paved anyway and the presence of a trolley car track directly in front of him evidently added to the terrors of the situation for him. So he stood there, embracing a lamppost and trying to make up his mind to the task, until my friend took pity on him. Saying, 'Poor devil! I've been in the same fix myself,' he went to his assistance. The man was grateful and clung to my friend

"Next day a policeman called to arrest my friend on the charge of having robbed somebody of a watch and chain. It was the drunken man, who, when he recover-ed, had found those articles missing and remembering my friend's name had sworn out a warrant against him. You can imagine what a sensation it created. The poor fellow was marched away to the station house and locked up, and we were in a state of mind. The afternoon papers were full of it of course, and it was talked all over town. You can imagine the relief to all of us when, late in the evening, a man appeared with the missing articles and stated that the drunken man had given them to him to take care of until he obered up. The charge was withdrawn of course and the profoundest apologies offered, but that day my friend quit Now Orleans and has never been there since.' -Charleston News and Courier.

UNDER NEW YORK'S WATERS.

What Could He Seen on the River Beds if Laid Bare. Not one person probably in 1,000 in New York city and very few of those who daily ride back and forth on the ferries have any idea of the topography of the bottom of the rivers and bay. Now sup-pose that the waters of the East and North rivers were dried up and the waters of the upper bay should recede to Sandy Hook, what sort of a picture do you suppose would be presented? Well, if you steed on the Battery and looked down into the bed of the upper bay you would see a great, deep basin with a sort of canyon running through it from the mouth of the North river to the Narrows. This canyon would form the bed of the ship channel.

You would have to go down an almost precipitous incline from the Battery to reach the bottom of the bay off the Barge office, and if you looked toward Governors island it would resemble a huge irregular castle with a stone parapet and rock bound sides. North of Governors island you would see the seamed remains of ing up the East river bed the New York and Brooklyn shores would appear anywhere from 25 to 30 feet above you, with the piers perched high on their wooder

Incidentally you would view some grew some secrets probably, which the waters had for years concealed, and north of the Brooklyn bridge, near Blackwell's island, you would come upon reefs that man has sought for years to destroy. A walk through the main ship channel to Sandy Hook would also be interesting, and th bed of the North river would reveal that systematic work has been done to so con trol the depth of the waters in it that the commerce of the world can now proceed for many miles up this great ship ther oughfare.-New York Journal.

Old Trinity Churchyard. There is no more dismal and hideous sight than a new graveyard full of glittering, obtrusive white monuments equare, ponderous and costly. But a bury ing ground which has attained a ripe age. say, a century or so, is capable of afford ing a distinct sensation of aesthetic pleas are. Toned and tempered by wind and weather into neutral harmony, the intruelve lettering on the stones half obliterated, there remains no ghastly funeral suggestion, but only a gentle impulse to quote Omar on the evanescence of things. Such a graveyard is the Old Trinity, past which the busy crowds of Broadway and Wall street surge all day. It is a thing of beauty, though perhaps not one in 100 of those eager faced men hurrying past ever stop to look at it or think of it. If he did, one imagines he would slacken his pace and perhaps take a half holiday. The ancient plot of ground, sown thick with low gray and brown stones and looking like a field of mushrooms, makes that husean torrent rushing by seem melancholy and meaningless. - New York Commercial Advertiser.

THE SENSE OF DIRECTION.

In Horses It Is Strongly Developed Only In passing through Bombay early in 1850 I bought a fine black Kutch pony That NEEDS REPAIRING? If so, take them and marched with him to Kamptee, in central India, 560 miles. The evening after arrival I dined with the cavalry regiment at the far end of the cantonment, over three miles distant from the house I had secured, but on leaving the messhouse, the syco having run off at once in advance, I found myself plunged in worze than Egyptian darkness without the smallest conception of the road home or any trace of surrounding objects. The pony nevertheless took me along the whole distance, in at the gate of my compound and up to the house door, although he had nover been east of Bombay, much less acquainted with the cantonment of Kamp ubsequent occasions my friend found this horse's sense of direction quite unerring. But what appears to me a still more LIME KILNS, WILKIN'S AVE., remarkable instance of the sense in question was narrated by the same friend as connected with a horse he at one time pos sessed, which, reared by himself, showed such eleverness in undoing bolts and fas-tenings of all kinds that nothing short of a lock and key availed to keep him either in or out of his stable. On selling this animal to a planter who was then traveling right up to the north of Australia, over a thousand miles distant, he warned him that unless well secured en route the horse would almost certainly get back to his old stable. In a month or thereabout this actually occurred. The animal was one morning found in his stall little better than skin and bone, having, as my friend cal-culated by the dates given him, traveled right across a great part of the continent to his old home at the rate of over a hundred miles a day. On two subsequent occasions this horse got away from purchasers who, notwithstanding the information my friend gave of his past history. desired to possess him and returned from great distances to his old home, where he remained for the rest of his days, too clever to be parted with. Whether or not Ossian sang here, we are at the birthplace of the famous reel of Tulloch, in the land from which emanated the strange, wild music known to and loved by thousands to whom Ossian is only a name. Right in the midst of the strath and facing the Blue mountain is Tullochgorum, belonging to a sept of the clan Grant, with whom tradition has associated the peculiar music named after the district. Special services were held-one week for pigeon fliers, another week for sweeps and Mr. Whish's successor was as devoted and faithful a vicar as his predecessor, but lacked Mr. Whish's humor and discretion. He gave so harrowing a description of the denizens of the courts and alleys of the

The right way to bring a greyhound in to condition is to walk him steadily every day from 12 to 15 miles. He must not be allowed to potter along in the road in his own sweet way, but should be led by the trainer. The reason is that continual ex ercise is thus given, and this without tir ing the dog. When he comes in from hi walk, the greyhound is brushed and groomed. When the greyhound is at exer-

The walking exercise alone is not sufficlent, however. Every other day the greyhound is galloped, and this is done in the following manner: A kennel man holds the dogs. The trainer walks away for nearly half a mile. At a given signal the kennel man releases one of the dogs, who naturally gallops toward the trainer. When the dog has got away about 20 yards, another dog is released, and so the process goes on until all the dogs are running toward the trainer at a distance of about 20 yards from each other. If the Back of Western Hay Scales, dogs were allowed to run together, they would either play or fight with each other, spoiled.—Kansas City Journal. Dr. Kenneth Campbell, Oban, has been telling the story of the last living great auk. It seems about 50 years ago a strange bird was seen one day on St. Kilda. It was agreed to try to catch it, as, though it had an enormous beak, it seemed to have very small wings. Several of the natives who were adepts at bird stalking managed to get so near the strange monster that they threw themselves on the bird and, after a severe struggle, were successful in capturing it alive. When the huge bird was taken to the township, "the is land parliament" was assembled to deliberate on the strange visitor, and it was agreed to tie its legs securely with strong cords and to tether it for the night to a stout pin fixed in the ground near the houses and to decide its fate the next day. On the morrow the parliament was called very early, as the bird had made such Dideous noises during the night that hardly anybody could sleep. The bird was un-doubtedly considered an ovil emissary. After serious consideration the verdict was given to have the vile bird stoned to death, and the sentence was at once carried out. Months after this, when communications were again opened with St. Kilda and the natives minutely detailed the points of this awesome bird to a visitor, they were informed that if they had kept even the car-

After the congregation had listened about an hour some began to get weary and went out; others soon followed, greatother person started, whereupon the son stopped his sermon and said: "That is right, gentlemen. As fast as you are weighed pass out!" He continued his sermon some time aftr that, but no one disturbed him by leav-

My Victorian friend was at the time of the incident I am about to mention-som 30 years ago-engaged in breeding horses It appears that on one occasion while driving a mob of horses down to Melbourne for sale he lost his way in the bush, and, wandering on through most of the day vainly endeavoring to find his camp, had very nearly arrived at the despairing conviction that he was hopelessly lost, as not infrequently happens in Australia. Feeling the horse he was riding rather bearing on the bit to one side, it suddenly cocurred to him that the animal had the sense of direction, and, trusting entirely to this, he threw the reins on his neck. The horse, turning right round, got soon nto a lobbing canter and brought my friend direct to his camp, situated, as he judged, some seven miles away. On many His experience, however, of the majority of horses which passed through his hands was that they either possessed the sense in a very low degree or not at all.

Mutton, like all meat, is tough when first killed and should be hung long enough to grow tender. Good mutton should have an abundance of firm, white fat, but not an overfat appearance.
