CORNELIUS VANDERBILT.

His Generosity In the Matter of Christmas Gifts For Children. Mr. Cornelius Vaderbilt's large heartedness, thoughtfulness and love for children are signally attested by a little incident which a lady of this city told the writer a few days ago. She said that some years ago, a few days before Christmas, she went into a toy store to make a few purchases. While she was engaged in making her selections the clerk who was waiting upon her said: "Pardon me, madam, but you would do me a great favor if you would allow another of our clerks to wait upon you. Mr. Cornelius Vanderbilt has just come in-he always comes in about this time every year-and I always wait upon

"Vanderbilt. I was curious to see what he looked like, and I watched him while he there about the store, evidently giving as though he were purchasing railroads instead of toys. I left him still hard at work when I went out. Well, one day not long after I went into the same store and had the curiosity to ask the clerk the question if Mr. Vanderbilt had proved a good customer. The clerk replied that he toys, 'and besides,' she added, 'he gave the finest one I got this year.' "As showing how Mr. Vanderbilt's the boys and girls who were to receive level with Abou Ben Adhem's would who thus took pains, year after year, personally, to buy Christmas dolls and jumping jacks and Noah's arks and the rest so as to make little folks happy, some of whom, we may well believe, but for him would have found nothing in their stockings."-New York Mail and

Mr. Vanderbilt and Sam Barton. Cornelius Vanderbilt's lifelong friend, the late Samuel Barton, who was also his first cousin once removed, lay very ill at his home in this city a little while pefore Mr Vanderbilt was himself stricken with apoplexy. They had been playmates and schoolmates. Barton at the boarding school which he and young Vanderbilt attended had been the custodian of his cousin's pocket money. He was a little older than Cornelius Vanderbilt. Afterward Barton was one of the brokers for the old commodore, and he was esteemed a man of wealth when Cornelius Vanderbilt was drudging as a Mr. Vanderbilt heard that Mr. Barton was in some distress of mind as well as body, and he called upon him. The meeting was like that of men who have been playmates, and they spoke of their sports and of their experiences at the boarding school, and at last Mr. Vanderbilt very delicately inquired if there was anything that was causing Mr. Barton anxiety, and his old playmate replied that he was fearful that his estate would not leave his family comfortably provided for. Thereupon Mr. Vanderbilt said speaking the familiar name of childhood days, "Sam, don't let that worry you." That was all he said, but the next day he deposited in Mr. Barton's name large sum of money, not far from $50, 000. When Mr. Barton heard that, it seemed to give him peace, and he called his family to him, said that he was con tent to die, bade them goodby, and then saying "I am very tired," turned his face Philadelphia Press. The young king of Spain seems to have inherited his mother's cheerful tempera ment and to have a spirit of fun which etiquette cannot quench. The following story is being told of his majesty: The little king had been reading out t his tutor a sentence in the words, "She possessed in the highest degree the distinguished manners and grace of speech in herent in princesses," and to the tu-tor's amazement remarked, "That writer didn't know much about courts." "Why do you say that, sir?" "Well, look at that pair of princesses.

Too Easily Frightened. Henry Romeike has a good one on the newspapers, or on the men who write the yachting stuff. Henry is a news clipper and is now able to prove that when Vallarms and refused to answer. At the very 5c kyrie III came over here it was written time when you would suppose all decent no as the fastest and most dangerou yacht ever seen, and gloomy predictions were made about the race. A long farewell was said to the cup. Now Shamrock is the greatest thing on the water. Its equal never was known. The cup is going back to England! Our national danger is in the superlative. Everything we see, or do, or hold, or have, ends in "est."-New York Press.

The Bungling Printer. De Witt Talmage says that the worst wound he ever suffered from the mistake of a compositor was in the printing of a sermon of his on the Penitential Psalms. He had said: "The name of God does not once appear in this verse. Isn't that significant?" The printed version read: "The name of God does not once appear in this verse. Isn't that magnificent?"

One of his royal sisters, evidently dreadfully hot and sleepy, was sprawling over her desk in a very degage attitude, while the other, apparently unable to solve a difficult problem, was absently rubbing her eyes and looking dazed meanwhile His majesty tugged the hair of one and pinched the arm of another princess, evoking some very strong and familiar terms of sisterly reprobation. "There are distinguished manners and grace of speech for you!" he exclaimed, regarding triumphantly the tutor.-Lon-

Finishing an Unfinished Song. Charles Graham, the song writer, who recently died, left an unfinished song entitled, "She Always Loved You, Mother." In order to finish this, says The Musical Age, the music company to whom it belongs offered $50 for an ending. Although a ton of verse was received, no one succeeded in catching just the tone of the characteristic of It is an interesting thing that in all that immense mass of manuscript, some of it written by the most distinguished song writers and authors of the day, no one of them could quite take up the plaintive little song where Graham left it, which shows that there is a subtle expression of individuality even in this low grade poetry, and it opens an unlimited field for conjecture and analysis as to just why the public took so readily to this author's work, passing over that which appears on the surface to be equal-

MAGE ON SMALL ANNOYANCES. The Minor Troubles of Life Which Test Christian Fortitude and Patience-The Lesson of Trivial Irri-[Copyright, Louis Klopsch, 1899.]

Washington, Oct. 8.—This sermen by Dr. Talmage deals with a subject which appeals to all classes and conditions of men. His text is Deuteronomy vii, 20, "The Lord thy God will send the hornet." It seems as if the insectile world were

"Of course," the lady went on, "I exmade his purchases. He went here and much thought to what he was doing as had bought some $500 or $600 worth of me a Christmas present which is by far business training was evinced even in buying toys, the clerk stated that he brought with him to the store a list of these Christmas presents from him, and besides their names were their addresses all carefully written out. Abou Ben Adhem's name leads all the rest of the his fellow men. Certainly a place on a

The Persians attempted to conquer Christian city, but the elephants and the beasts on which the Persians rode were assaulted by the hornet, so that the whole angel's book of gold, because he loved army was broken up, and the besieged city was rescued. This burning and noxious insect stung out the Hittites and seem to be belitting the name of a man the Canaanites from their country. What gleaming sword and chariot of war could not accomplish was done by the puncture of an insect. "The Lord sent the hornet." My friends, when we are assaulted by great behemoths of trouble we become chivalric, and we assault them. We get on the high mettled steed of our courage, and we make a cavalry charge at them, and if God be with us we come out stronger and better than when we went in. But alas for these insectile annoy ances of life, these foes too small to shoot, these things without any avoirdupois weight, the gnats and the midges nets! In other words, it is the small stinging annoyances of our life which drive us out and use us up. In the best conditioned life for some grand and glorious purpose God has sent the hornet. I remark, in the first place, that these small stinging annoyances may come in the shape of a nervous organization. People who are prostrated under typhoid fevers or with broken bones get plenty of sympathy, but who pities anybody that is nervous? The doctors say and the family say and everybody says, "Oh, she's only a little nervous; that's all!" sound of a heavy foot, the harsh clearing of a throat, a discord in music, a want of harmony between the shawl and the glove on the same person, a curt answer, a passing slight, the wind from the east, any one of ten thousand annoyances. opens the door for the hornet. The fact s that the vast majority of the people in this country are overworked, and their nerves are the first to give out. A great multitude are under the strain of Levden, who, when he was told by his physician that if he did not stop working while he was in such poor physical health he would die, responded, "Doctor, whether I live or die, the wheel must keep going round." These sensitive persons of whom I speak have a bleeding sensitiveness. The flies love to light on anything raw, and these people are like the Canaanites spoken of in the text or in the context-they have a very thin covering and are vulnerable at all points 'And the Lord sent the hornet."

The Retnilers of Gossip. Again, the small insect annoyances may ome to us in the shape of friends and equaintances who are always saying dis agreeable things. There are some people ou cannot be with for half an hour bu you feel cheered and comforted. Then there are other people you cannot be with for five minutes before you feel mis erable. They do not mean to disturb you out they sting you to the bone. They gather up all the yarn which the gossip spin and retail it. They gather up all the adverse criticisms about your per son, about your business, about your home, about your church, and they make your ear the funnel into which they pour it. They laugh heartily when they tell yeu, as though it were a good joke and you laugh, too-outside.

These people are brought to our atten-tion in the Bible, in the book of Ruth. Naomi went forth beautiful and with the finest worldly prospects into another land, but after awhile she came back widowed and sick and poor. What did her friends do when she came to the city They all went out, and instead of giving her common sense consolation, what did they do? Read the book of Ruth an find out. They threw up their hands an said. "Is this Naomi?" as much as to say, "How awful bad you do look! When I entered the ministry, I looked very pale for years, and every year, for four or five years, many times a year was asked if I had not consumption, and, passing through the room, I would some times hear people sigh and say, "A-ah, not long for this world!" I resolved in those times that I never in any conversation would say anything depressing, and by the help of God I have kept the resoution. These people of whom I speak reap and bind in the great harvest field of discouragement. Some day you greet them with a hilarious "Good morning," and they come buzzing at you with some depressing information. "The Lord sent | 408 W. Lexington St., Near Eutaw St. the hornet." It is astonishing how some people pre fer to write and to say disagreeable things. That was the case when Henry

M. Stanley returned after his magnificent exploit of finding David Livingstone When Mr. Stanley stood before the sa vants of Europe and many of the small critics of the day, under pretense of get ting geographical information, put to him most insolent questions, he folded his men would have applauded the heroisi of the man there were those to hiss. "The Lord sent the hornet." And when afterward that man sat down on the western coast of Africa, sick and worn out, with perhaps the grandest achievement of the age in the way of geographical discovery there were small critics all over the world to buzz and buzz and caricature and deride him, and when after awhile he got the London papers, as he opened them, out flew the hornet. When I see that there are so many people in the world who like to say disagreeable things and write disagreeable things, I come almost in my weaker moments to believe what man said to me in Philadelphia one Monday morning. I went to get the horse at the livery stable, and the hostler, a plain man, said to me, "Mr. Talmage, I saw
