

his empty vanity, grasp for those distinctions which were ordained to reward heroic achievements—that he should threaten the minister of the day with the deflection of his nominees in that house, unless he obtained that ribbon, which, though an ornament to merit, must, when otherwise conferred, be considered a badge of disgrace to the wearer. Has such a case ever happened, or was it impossible that it should ever happen again? Had it never occurred that measures of a similar nature were made to a minister, unless his countenance was given to some proposed public work, in which was, however, blended some little of private interest, but for the accomplishment of which the public money was to be entirely applied? If, then, such things have happened—if they can happen again—who was it that could deny it to be a most profligate exercise of those powers which were entrusted for far different purposes? Between the contending opinions of his hon. friend and that of the right hon. gentleman (Mr. Beane) opposite, he (Mr. W.) was placed in a dreadful alternative—His hon. friend said, that unless reform took place, a military despotism would follow. The right honourable gentleman was fully persuaded, that if reform was conceded, this country, after being dragged through the vortex of democracy, would at length be subjected to a military government. It was not for him to say that either consequence would follow; but in adjuring that house to acquiesce in the motion for going into a committee, he would appeal to the authorities of the dead to strengthen the admonitions of the living. I call upon you to bear in remembrance the mighty characters who have expressed their decided support of this question of reform. The horrors of that democracy which the denial of reform had accelerated in France, have subsided from their own exhaustion. England, though buffeted in the tempest, has escaped from the general wreck which has befallen so many other nations. Will she not profit even by their example? Will she, with their calamities and their late speaking to her with more than oracular force, refuse to redress, and, by such in situation, hurry to the same destiny?—Events have taken place within these walls which have sunk deep into the hearts of the people. It is true, that many of the gentlemen opposite think the impression done away, and that the popular reason is now righted. If the right honourable gentleman opposite (Mr. Peaseval), the first minister of this country, thinks himself justified by the decisions of this house, he must allow me to tell him, that he grossly deceives himself. Let me assure him, that the votes of this house, which were meant to justify his actions, have in no considerable degree increased the advocates for parliamentary reform. Those fears, which springing from the changes of Europe in 1792, had so alarmed the mind against innovation, now cease to operate. All men see the absolute necessity of reforming—they see that danger pressing upon them which was so feared and so expected when our expenditure was ten millions. When afterwards twenty millions. How much more chilling the prospect when it has been increased to seventy millions! and when we contemplate the awful truth, that all human resources are finite! There was little to add to the reasoning already advanced at various periods upon the subject. But with respect to the sale of seats, he would contend that the man returned by his money could have little connexion with the public feeling. With constituents he could never come in contact, perhaps never see them. He therefore had no bias to comply with their opinions. He felt and acted as the representative of his soul. When versed in the system of ministerial management, he would not remain long backward in pursuing that course which he observed followed by so many to their own private advantage. Mr. Whitbread next adverted to the Septennial Act, which, abstractedly considered, he thought most tyrannical, but which was in some degree justified by the motive which led to its adoption at the time, namely, the preservation of the house of Brunswick on the throne of these realms. He would vote for triennial parliaments, and for regulating the manner of taking votes.—The latter would be a consequence of the first, and without it the other would be intolerable. Whether under a reform the members returned would be intrinsically better than those who now sit there, he would not say; but by coming under so many popular checks as much good would be produced as if they were intrinsically better. After expressing his wish to see, though not the efficient officers of the crown, yet their dependents removed from that house, he concluded with observing, that even though no other good was to follow but the satisfaction of the people, for that the exertion should be made, and from its accomplishment the most salutary benefits would follow.

On application to the subscriber in the recess of the court, as Chief Judge of the sixth judicial district of the state of Maryland by petition in writing of Sater T. Walker, of Baltimore county, stating that he is in actual confinement, and praying the benefit of the act of the general assembly of the state of Maryland, entitled, "An act for the relief of sundry insolvent debtors," passed at November session 1805, and the several supplements thereto, on the terms therein mentioned, a schedule of his property and a list of his creditors, on oath, as far as he can ascertain them, being annexed to his petition; and the said Sater T. Walker, having satisfied me by competent testimony, that he has resided two years within the state of Maryland, immediately preceding the time of his application; and the said Sater T. Walker having taken the oath by the said act prescribed for delivering up his property, and giving sufficient security for his personal appearance at the county court of Baltimore county, to answer such allegations as may be made against him: I do therefore appoint Middleton B. Magruder his trustee, and do order and adjudge that the said Sater T. Walker be discharged from imprisonment, and that by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in one of the public newspapers in the city of Baltimore, every other day for three months successively, before the thirteenth day of October next, he give notice to his creditors to appear before the said court, at the court house of said county, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day, for the purpose of recommending a trustee for their benefit, and to shew cause, if any they have, why the said Sater T. Walker should not have the benefit of the said act and supplements. Given under my hand this seventh day of June, eighteen hundred and ten. JOSEPH H. NICHOLSON. July 12 e3m G. & R. By order of the Board, JAMES LAW, Cashier. July 10 Notice is hereby given, THAT on the 27th of June last, the subscriber purchased of ———— An Iron Grey HORSE, stout and well made, with a long dark mane and a black tail; about 14 or 15 hands high, 3 years old this spring. The Horse was bought at the Horse Market; for 55 dollars payable in ten days—at the expiration of which time the person who sold him was to give satisfactory proof of the Horse being his property. This is a surprising circumstance, and the Horse being worth double the money, it induces me to believe that he was stolen. The owner is hereby desired to come forward, to prove property, pay charges, and take him away. JOHN CUNNINGHAM. N. B. Any person making a plea, respecting him, will please enquire at John Cunningham's Livery Stable at the Horse Market, Baltimore. July 10 e4t Just Published, And will in a few days be delivered to Subscribers in Baltimore, Price 1 Dollar—nearly bound and lettered, The American's Guide; CONTAINING THE Constitutions of the United States, with the late amendments; the Declaration of Independence, Articles of Confederation, and the Federal Constitution with Acts for the Government of the Territories; the Inauguration Speeches of the several Presidents; and Washington's Valuable Address, to the Citizens of the United States, in 1796, making above 450 pages, 18mo. The publisher flatters himself, that the present edition of the Constitutions, will be found more correct, than any heretofore published, which, with the several articles annexed, makes it much more valuable, and ought to be possessed by every individual.

LAND FOR SALE. The subscriber has a PLANTATION lying on the Patapsco Falls, about four miles from Rister's Town, eight from Westminster, one from Hooker's mill, and twenty one from Baltimore. This land extends to, and fronts the Turpike road a considerable distance,—there are some beautiful lots; well adapted for either store or tavern. This tract contains 150 acres, more or less; there is near 30 acres of meadow fronting the house; some of which is in timothy and some of it is yet to clear; there is a fine ditch of water which extends a considerable way through the meadow, and runs within two rods of the house, which is very convenient; also an excellent spring not far from the house, and many others too tedious to mention. The improvements are a Log Dwelling House 38 feet long and 16 feet wide, divided into two rooms and a fire place in each; also a Log Barn and some other small buildings; an excellent Garden 90 feet square, a young Apple Orchard of 160 trees, some grafted with different kinds of fruit. This tract lies beautiful to the sun and produces well, and is a very healthy place, as much so I believe, as any in Baltimore county; and a plenty of wood land on it. Whoever is disposed to purchase will apply to the subscriber. JAMES O. CROWMELL. July 7 d4t This is to give Notice, THAT the Subscriber hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Baltimore County, in Maryland—Letters Testamentary on the Personal Estate of Robert Courtney, late of Baltimore county, deceased.
