the war—unless we change our system. If we are content to abandon the European trade, or if we are disposed to make Britain, as we were compelled to do before our revolution, the only market at which to sell and to buy, why only let it be so determined by the voice of the people, those who are in the minority may retire to the woods or bite their thumbs with dignified moderation—but let us at the same time cease to abuse France for assimilating us to the planters of Jamaica—let us have no more about "free trade and no submission"—and when licences are talked of let us be silent about tribute, and then perhaps it may be as well to take Mr. Harper's advice and no longer read the declaration of independence.

What I have so far said, alludes to our pounds, shillings, and pence interests: I maintain that, if avarice is our ruling passion, and profits our first object, it is absolutely necessary to change our system of government—they can never live long under the same roof.

In my estimation, however, there is something more precious than mercantile profit, and that is national character. Have we at any time maintained a national character? I assert that, with the exception of the embargo, we have not adopted a single measure compatible with our rights or honourable to our character—the same dull course of temporising policy and cabinet intrigue, which was commenced under the auspices of Hamilton and Hammond in 1794, has with little variation been pursued in one shape or other ever since. Read, in the following description, from the pen of Mr. James Munroe in 1797, what our condition was up to that period, and let every reader answer would not the description equally suit at this moment.

"The contrast, between the station we might have held, through the whole of this war, and that which we have held, is a striking one. We might have stood well with France, avoiding all the losses we have sustained from her; enjoying the benefit of free trade, and even appeared as an advocate for those principles, and without going to any extremity; we might have preserved our ancient renown, brought at a great expense of blood and treasure, in a long war, in a contest for liberty, and even appeared as a defender of liberty, and without fighting her. We might too in my opinion, have commanded a better fortune in our negociations with Britain, and only by availing ourselves, in a suitable manner, of the fortunes of France. And, instead of a situation so advantageous, so honourable, so satisfactory to our country, what is that into which our government has conducted us? Our navigation destroyed, commerce laid waste, and a general bankruptcy threatening those engaged in it; the friendship of a nation lost, the most powerful on earth, who had deserved better things of us, and had offered to place us, our vessels and commodities, on the footing of its native citizens in all its dominions; war hanging over us, and that not on the side of liberty and the just affections of our people, but of monarchy and our late most deadly foe; and, we are made fast by treaty and by the spirit of those at the helm, to a nation bankrupt in its resources, and rapidly verging either to anarchy or despotism. Nor is this all—our national honour is in the dust; we have been kicked, cuffed, and plundered all over the ocean; our reputation for faith scouted; our government and people branded as cowards, incapable of being provoked to resist, and ready to receive again those chains we had taught others to burst. Long will it be before we shall be able to forget what we are, nor will centuries suffice to raise us to the high ground from which we have fallen."——Monroe's view, page 66.

Such was the picture drawn by the hand of a master in 1797: Yet in his most dismal anticipations, he did not fully anticipate the dreadful extent of our present degradation; he did not imagine that for the succeeding thirteen years every change would be for the worse; he did not, he could not, suppose that our national honour would remain in the dust, under every change of parties and of men—yet such events have we all lived to witness; we have lost the friendship not only of France but of her allies, and after all have acquired nothing but increased enmity and injury from the nation, for whom we made this sacrifice.

Not that I would have had a war pursued (though that would have been better than sneaking submission) for I think with col. Monroe, that we might at any time have saved our reputation without going to extremity: but this I maintain, that our form of government is good for nothing if we cannot enforce our own laws, and that we should not complain of aggression without having the spirit to resent it.

Look back, therefore, upon our history; I see no material change, that was not disastrous since Mr. Monroe penned the above extract, unless for the period of Mr. Jefferson's administration, during which we escaped injuries from France; and I am thus warranted in saying that a change of system is as essential to our honour and national character as to our interests. If we adhere to the present mongrel system, we may be assured that we shall remain in disgrace and jeopardy during the war, and that at its close we shall stand in the most humiliating condition of any people on earth. But, by abandoning it, we shall advocate the principles of free trade, retain the reputation we have had tarnished, replace our commerce on a prosperous footing with the best customers we ever had or can have, secure "the fortunes of France" and her allies in our behalf during the war, and their powerful friendship at its termination.

What should be substituted for the present system, there surely should be wisdom enough in this nation to devise—no change can make our condition more mortifying than it is: France has openly and explicitly declared, it would replace us in all respects upon our once favourable position with that nation, if Britain, the first aggressor, would repeal her orders of council issued prior to the Berlin decree; Britain has avowed that she was the first aggressor, but refuses to repeal those orders—these questions are simple; then must we submit to ruin because it is the interest of Britain to destroy our trade? Are we unable to maintain our own rights and honour?—Will we make an attempt, in earnest, to break the shackles that bind us to the desperate fate of Britain?

FOR SALE,

A NEGRO WOMAN of excellent character, about 21 years of age. She is expert at cooking and washing—industrious, honest, sober and of good disposition.

On no account would she be sold, but her present owner being about to remove to an adjacent state, is prevented by the laws of that state to introduce her there.

It would be desirable that she should be sold in Baltimore, but on no account will she be sent out of the state.

It is expected that whoever may purchase will give bond, with security, if required, that she shall not be sold to any of the regular traders in human flesh.

March Term, 1810.

ON application to the Judges of Dorchester county court, by Kirby Hurley of the said county aforesaid, by petition in writing, praying the benefit of the act of the general assembly of Maryland, passed at November session, eighteen hundred and five, for the relief of sundry insolvent debtors and the several supplementary acts thereto, on the terms mentioned in the said—a schedule of his property and a list of his creditors on oath, as far as he can ascertain them as directed by the said acts being annexed to his petition; and the said court being satisfied by competent testimony, that the said Kirby Hurley has resided the two preceding years within the state of Maryland.

It is thereupon adjudged and ordered by the said court, that the said Kirby Hurley, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in one of the newspapers in the city of Baltimore, and one in the town of Easton, three months before Saturday the third day of November next, and to be continued in the said papers for four successive weeks; and also, by setting up like notice at the court house door, three months before the said day. Give notice to his creditors to appear before the said county court, at the court house in the said county on the said day, for the purpose of recommending a trustee, for their benefit, and to answer interrogatories what his creditors may propose to him, the said Kirby Hurley then and there complying with the requisites of the said acts of assembly.

August 2 law4w

Baltimore County, ss.

ON application to the subscriber in the recess of the Court, as one of the associate judges of the sixth judicial district of the state of Maryland, by petition in writing of William Moore, of Baltimore county, stating that he is in actual confinement, and praying the benefit of the act of the general assembly of the state of Maryland, passed at November session eighteen hundred and five, entitled, an act for the relief of sundry insolvent debtors, and the several supplements thereto on the terms therein mentioned—a schedule of his property and a list of his creditors on oath, as far as he can ascertain being annexed to his said petition; and the said William Moore having satisfied me by competent testimony, that he has resided two years within the state of Maryland, immediately preceding the time of his application; and the said William Moore having taken the oath by the said act prescribed for delivering up his property; and having given sufficient security for his personal appearance at the county court of Baltimore county, to answer such allegations as may be made against him by his creditors.

I do therefore appoint Luke Tiernan his trustee, and order and adjudge that the said William Moore be discharged from imprisonment; and that by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some one of the public newspapers in the city of Baltimore every other day for three months successively, before the seventeenth day of November next, he give notice to his creditors to appear before the said court at the court house of said county, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day, for the purpose of recommending a trustee for their benefit, and to shew cause if any they have, why the said Wm. Moore should not have the benefit of said act and supplements. Given under my hand this 14th day of August, eighteen hundred and ten.

In submitting the above scheme to the public, the Managers will not attempt any eulogium on the importance or necessity of the object in view. They believe that, at this time, not a doubt exists in the mind of any well informed person, of the efficacy of the Kine Pock as a safe and certain preventative of the Small Pox. The difficulty, and it might be added the impossibility, of preserving this remedy without the aid of an Institution, (such as is intended to be established and supported by the profits arising from this Lottery) is also well known. But it is proper to observe, that this Institution not only contemplates to preserve the genuine Vaccine Matter for the use of the citizens of this state, but also to give it, at all times, free of every expence, (with directions when required) to any of them who may have occasion to use it. To aid them in accomplishing objects such as these, the Managers feel confident of the liberal and prompt support of the public.

The Scheme on an attentive examination, will be found to afford inducements to adventurers, at least equal to any heretofore proposed in this city. All prizes will be paid within sixty days after the drawing is completed.
