

British cruelty, and British Vice admirals judges stop at! But the immortal Washington then watched over the destinies of America, and all her citizens. The moment he heard of Barney's capture, and the danger of his situation, he dispatched a fast sailing sch'r, with letters to the Governor of Jamaica, to demand Captain Barney.—Washington did this when an embargo existed in America, on account of British spoliations; which displays very forcibly the great esteem which that great man entertained for him. He was acquitted, and returned to America.—General Washington appointed him to the command of a first rate frigate then to be built. In June 1794, he sailed with James Monroe and family to France.—On their arrival at Paris, Mr. Monroe was received with open arms and the most enthusiastic admiration by the National Convention,—as the Representative of the first nation that had sent a minister to the Republic, or acknowledged France as such; Mr. Monroe in the spirit of republican friendship, sent a Flag of the United States, to be placed in the Hall of the Convention; and Joshua Barney was charged to present it. When the splendid ceremony was performed amidst the acclamations of respect, and shouts of applause—the Convention voted, that Commodore Barney should be employed in the navy of the Republic—grounding their appointment on these reasons—That Commodore Barney having rendered so much service in giving liberty to America, (as mentioned in Mr. Monroe's letter to the Convention) would be a proper person to aid in fighting against its enemies in Europe.

In this manner, truly honourable to himself and terrible to his old implacable enemy (Great Britain) did Joshua Barney, become an officer in the navy of France, at a time when she was fighting for liberty against a combined world.—Good fortune did not forsake Barney in his new commission. The enemies of Freedom he often combated, and as often beat. But mark it Americans! for Calumny has been busy in misrepresenting the motives that led Barney into the French service, and his conduct in it.—When he entered it in the manner stated, every bosom heaved with wishes, and sympathetic pulsations for the success of France. She was then contending for republican liberty, and she would have established it, had not repeated coalitions turned her industrious citizens into military legions. A powerful standing army drove republicanism out of France; and then Barney ferreted it also. When Bonaparte usurped the powers of the regular constituted legislature of the French nation, and deposed the council of five hundred, Commodore Barney, as soon as he could settle his affairs in France, returned to his native country.—He loved independence too well, to remain in France notwithstanding the wealth and honours he might have acquired under Bonaparte.

After residing in his native country for four years he became a candidate to represent us in the congress of the United States, and he was elected—having the greatest number of votes of any candidate in the city. But he was deprived of his seat by a resolve of congress—which absolutely annulled the laws of this state, and trampled on the liberties of Maryland. A decision so monstrous, so destructive of the boasted sovereignty of the states, should rouse the spirited indignation of every voter in the district: they ought to force into Congress by the constitutional energy of the popular voice, the man who was thus deprived of his seat. We owe it to ourselves, to our country, to posterity, to honour, to adhere to the cause of the man who was unjustly jostled out of congress, though we elected him fairly. But let us leave digression.

We find the vigor and spirit of Commodore Barney still unabated, and his hand still ready to strike in defence of his country. Immediately after the outrage on the Chesapeake he wrote the following letter to Thomas Jefferson, offering his personal services to avenge our insulted flag and wounded honour.

Baltimore, July 4, 1807.
To Thomas Jefferson, President of the United States.

SIR,
At a moment like the present, I conceive it the duty of every citizen to step forward in the support of his country. I therefore beg leave to tender you my personal services, and shall be happy to be employed by you, in any manner which may be conducive to the good of my country, and the support of the present administration.

I am, Sir, yours,
With respect and esteem,
JOSHUA BARNEY.

Two years ago, Joshua Barney being a candidate, Mr. Wiggler came forward as a federal candidate. Joshua Barney not to divide the democratic interest, declined a poll in favor of Mr. McKim.—Again he offered as a candidate to represent this city at the next election.

This is a general sketch of Joshua Barney's actions and conduct, &c. Volumes might be written in giving the particulars of each battle, and his numerous and severe sufferings when in the hands of the enemy of our country; the indignant treatment of him by confinement in loathsome prisons and dungeons—half starving him for weeks and months, with black bread and water—by loading him with heavy irons and confinement in the hold of the prison ship at New York, by sending him to England from New York to be hung as a rebel—which would no doubt have taken place, had not the freedom of America risen in their might, and captured the army under Burgoyne; his making his escape from a prison in England, where he had been confined twenty months—his hair breadth escapes from being again captured when travelling through England to get to the United States—and a thousand other circumstances which happened to him during nine years' service, when our country was not in a situation to pay, feed, or clothe the officers or men in her service; during which time he was always faithful, and did his duty as a soldier and a freeman. This is a brief undeniable history of facts: these are the meritorious claims of Joshua Barney on the free citizens of this district, for their support at the next election. His long and faithful services—his knowledge of mankind—his intercourse with foreign nations—his information in commercial transactions, make him a fit and proper person to represent this city in the next congress. As a small renunciatant, every citizen is called upon to support him. He who supported your credit and prowess in battle, will never betray you in the councils of the nation.

A FRIEND TO MERIT.
Baltimore, Sept. 3, 1810.
The Evening Post and American will please insert the above.

CRESTON alias WALSHINGHAM.
A paper, of which the following is a copy, was found in the jail of Fincastle, on the same morning that the fate of that unfortunate man was discovered, and of whom some notice has already been taken in our former numbers.

On being brought before a Court, called for the purpose, bail to the amount of two thousand dollars was demanded for his appearance at the next term. This bail Walshingham obtained and offered to the court; but we are told that, on the suggestion of the State's attorney, the further sum of eight thousand dollars was required. It was then on the exorbitance of a demand which he deemed oppressive, that this ill fated man formed his final desperate determination. Whatever may have been his failings or his crimes, the following cannot be read with indifference by any man of sense or sensibility.

[Lynchburg Star
The object and end of justice is defeated, if laws are made a nullity by irregular commitments, and excessive bail demanded for a bailable offence. Honor is unsafe in such keeping. I prefer death to a forced submission, and indignities consequent on submission.
" Spare the stranger, for whom alone my last pulse beat—a knowledge of which would be to her a scene of horror. Let it suffice that I die for her. She is the innocent, injured victim of circumstances, which she neither (could) foresee or avoid. No person can claim the trifling property left in this room. Let it be given to some one in charity, without parade. I have no other estate—I have no family. The spirit that once animated this mangled body, disdains to ask the least grace for it, of fellow worms. Perhaps the first paragraph in this note is unjust: if so, let those whom it concerns be happy—To die is human. Let no one say too much or too little has been written. The dead cannot reply."

NORTH-CAROLINA ELECTION.
We have received no return from the Rockingham district, but have no doubt James Cochran is elected. The following will then be members from this state in the 12th Congress.

Richard Stanford, Wm. R. King,
Nathaniel Macon, Arch. M'Byrde,
Willis Alston, Meshack Franklin
Thomas Blount, Joseph Pennington,
Lemuel Sawyer, James Cochran,
Wm Blackledge, Israel Pickens
All republicans except Mr. Peason and Mr. M'Byrde.

[Raleigh Reg.
FROM THE BOSTON PATRIOT.
SHORT READINGS
Preparatory to the Election of Members of Congress.

"Resolved—That the United States cannot, without a sacrifice of their rights, honor and independence, submit to the edicts of Great Britain and France."
[Representatives in Congress]
[Concluded from yesterday]

THE SUBSTANCE OF THE MATTER
Appears to be chiefly this:—We have already, by the negative qualifications and conduct of our anti-national representatives, submitted to more manifest and unprincipled encroachments upon our rights—to far greater insults and injuries, than those which roused the spirit of '75. With the invaluable charter of our well defined and well protected liberties, bought with the price of our fathers' blood, and guaranteed by the oath or the honor of every man in the community.—With this in our hands; with incomparably greater means for defence or annoyance than we possessed at any period of our contest for independence, at our ready command—and with the best government in theory that the world has ever produced—we have become, and are at this day, (so far as the acts, or the want of action of our representatives can bind us) in fact, the very colonists and vassals of the same power, that before her acknowledgement of our nominal sovereignty, claimed the right to regulate our commerce, and to tax us without the right of representation. This is solemn, and to us shameful truth—certainly not the less so, for having been said or insinuated by the Duke of Cadore. Were the Devil disposed to sell such truths as might shame himself, his assertion would neither let nor excuse the fact of our disgrace. What then must be done?

If the people of America approve their vassalage, and wish the protection of the tyrant of the ocean, and the virtual tax, gatherer of every land that submits to his protection, let them elect for their representatives to the 12th congress, those who have conceded our rights by their professions, and abandoned them altogether by their acts—they will confirm, and by our implied consent, the shameful deed of our lordship, which wants nothing on their part already, but the formal act of delivery.

If we will to be free, and also determined to reassert the rights, honor, and independence of the United States, it becomes our duty to be represented by men who have the courage and the wisdom to adopt the means, and pursue the measures necessary to carry our will in effect.—Those are at hand—the great strength of the adversary—the cry of sin of our shame, is the want of a heart to use the means which God and nature have put in our possession.

SAMUEL BROWN
Has the pleasure of announcing to his friends and patrons, and the public generally, that his ACADEMY was opened again this day. From the great forwardness of his new building he hopes to remove his family into it, in the course of next spring; when the lower as well as the upper story of the Academy house, will be occupied by his pupils. For the heavy expense which he has incurred in purchasing and improving the excellent situation, of which he is now possessed, he asks no other remuneration than a continuance of the very generous patronage, with which he has been favored during the last fifteen years.
