Surely the voters of this district intend to arouse, and be true to themselves on the first wonden of October next. For God's soke, let us shew that we are not wholly prepared to wear the livery and chains of slavery; but that we have something of the spirit of our fathers and have not forgotten that glorious rev olution, in which Commodore Barney so nobly distinguished himself.
LILERTY OR DEATH.

IMPORTANT.

The recall of Mr Jackson has been announced to our government in a letter f om his Britannic majesty, to the president of the United States.

The applicatment of Mr. Morier, as his Britannic majes'v's secretary of lega tion to the United States, his been announced in a letter from lord Wellesley to Mr. Secretary Smith, with the further information that Mr Moriar would act in the character of his majesty's charge des affaires until the appointment of Mr. Jackson's successor

REMARKS—The United States will never ret ieve the credit lost at the last session, until they know how to appreciate their national character. I' is ab surd to suggest, "that the honor of the United States, had been preserved by an immediate communication from the king of Ergland, instead of Mr. Jackson," or any other subordina e agent. How humiliating mus it appear in Europe, to the French, Russians, Austrians, &c, when they, find that a paper (apparently a government one) is exulting at the idea, that the king of E gland had condescended to 1 troduce under his own hand writing a charge des affaires, when he had affronted the president of the United States, in violating a negociatton by his minister, Mr Erskine. We hope the Intelligencer does not in this instance speak the language of government. What is the mighty boon obtain ed by a letter in the hand writing of king George. (a mere maniae) who stands upon the principles of the British consti tution, as no way responsible for what he does? Can we be so ignorant as to lose the responsibility of the British na tion through the medium of their mintstry, and take up with the insignificant leter of the king? "The king can do no " is the maxim of the nation. If Mrong he violates his engagements, he can do no wrong If he flings a copy of his let ter into the face of the president, after he has violated every principle of it, he can do no wrong. The fact is, the Bri can do no wrong. The fact is, the British are shifting their ground as it is lates to this country. How mus the mi nistry exult to find we are so pleased with a charge des aff ires, because he is introduced by a man without any respon sibility attached to his conduct? we see willing to release Mr. Ersking, to whose responsibility the British nation is bound in horor to adhere. We again say, we hope this is not the language of government. Indeed, it conno be, as the president is not now at Wishing-We shall reprebate the idea of any department of government presuming to dictate. The constitution knows of no

We have ever been desirous to respect the core ituted authorities. We still ad here to our first principles; still confide in the Executive. We will not sacrifice our friends to please our enemies. But while thus tenacious of characters, we will not be deceived; and must say, there can be nothing more fallecious than to take the fatile hand wring of the king of England, instead of minis erial instruc tions, and a charge des afficies in the place of a minister. The king of Engand in connection with the nation, is the entest-bagatelle we can exhibit on the political stage. The king of England is a cypher in a national vew, for there is no responsibility attached to his conduct. Are the United States to be duped by the fully and ignorance of those who may in a clandestine manner steal into a go-vernment paper? If the British nation will violate a solomn engagement entered into by their winis er, can we suppose they will regard any thing done by a sub-adiate in the character of charge des affaires? Away, away, with such which was broken for the purpose of be ing cooked for dinner; but, on examination the contents were found to consist of a dark muddy slime, neither resembling the yolk nor the white of an egg. in the middle of which was deposited a young snake, of the length of ten inches! When the egg was broken, the reptile unfolded itself, and remained apparently in a healthy state for about twenty hours, when having wrapt fixelf up again, it soon after died, and is now preserved in spirits by Mr. Clemishaw Leed's Mercury.

Duck Eggs - We have always felt a littlesceptical on reading in the papers accounts of the fatal effects produced on some coasions by eating ducks eggs; but a circumstance has recently occurred In this reignbourheed, that must remove all doubts on that subject. A short time ago, a duck be onging to Mr John Clemish.w, of Winmoor, near Leeds, laid an egg, rather above the ordinary size, arrived at Lisbon, in 32 days.
