Innyinge I have stripted statement and receiving of the foppery of affectation; and smongst my other sirs, is that of having shews, of having proved beyond all dispute, that very much of what is called 'learning.' is imposture, quite uscless to any man whom God has blessod will brains.

FROM THE AURODA.

DECLAR OF CREDIT IN GREAT BRITAIN & IRELAND. It is unnecessary to refer our readers to the unucipations of several years pas in this paper, on he inevitable feets of the Pricish financial and commercial forcing syste :-- Our ie. dets at least cantot have lorgotten the particular essay under the signature of Truefenny -Cou.da y rational mind colou'a e upon s trade carried on through Heligoland, through Mal a, through Sardmla or Algiers, 24 competent to pay expences and return profits-or to make returns any way adequa e to value? The facility with which credits are given and taken, is proveitial - the difficulty of realizing deb sor barring p yments is still more generally know. The excess of e.edit, generally know. The excess of ciedit, besides glutting the markets wherever goods fied an illicit access, effects the fair paying oculer—and thus round the circle of commerce all its principles are overstrained and i.s objects defeated.

The depreciation of the paper money of Great Brisein and the conseque t de struction of bo h public and private credis (events which could not have occurred so long as British commerce et creased in rails with the augmentation of the circulating medium,) are n w in rapid progress to their accomplishment, in consequence of the novel system adopted by the powers on the conti ent of Lu rope which by refusing to receive the productions of England, or by receiving them when a suggled, and either confiscaring or not psying for them, has pa-ralized and rendered her commercial monepoly, and the effects of her industry, nearly usaless to her.

The last arrivals from Great Britain furnish us with accounts of an immense number of failures in the city of London of feitures of the country banks, &c. and in the south of I clo d, where bank notes have had a more ex ensive circu-lation than in other sections of that king dom, there appears to be nearly a gene ral bankruptcy. The cause I obvious to all, except these who believe hat an a must accu mulation of deb and taxer, can never produce a national bank-uptcy in Great Britain merely because fo-tuiteus cir cumstances in commerce have prevented the occurrence of that catastrophe so s on as we precince! In the year 1797 the bank of England became so exhausted of specie, in consequence of having supplied the government with funds to pay the subsidies to the emparor of Gernbay, the king of Prussia, &c for the purpose of "h" string France out of the shap of Entope," that it became necessity o stop payment, and since that period, to the present d y, the bank has paid no space to the pub-lic, and has liquidated as old deb s only by issuing new notes These notes, it appears, have passed with the British pub ic for the last thir teen years as a circusting medium, the same as if their value on I been established by specie of a solid kind representing them in the value of the back. The efectives that the back directors finding themselve exercised from meeting there is a exercised from meeting their costs with specific extend their discounts and commented the emission of their rotes from obsern millions, at the part inf their delabation, to nearly if not qui e 20 a illions steeling in the year 1809; and in the mear time, whatever specie die him, postested, was at the disposition to Bookst musisier

A similar system was adopted by the bank of free and the circulating medium of bits of unities and mercantile accommo i tron, were enormously encreased. The country banks for owed the example of the mether bank, and is sued then pape, without regard to the spiculation to persons of no real capital. who have been ship ing large'y to the Mediterrance the Balde to Sexony, to Spain, th. Brezlis, the West Indies, &c where they have found only ruinous markets; and this is the chief cause why the exports of Great Britain appeare i by the budget of last year to be so unusually large, and which afforded cause for so much decepti us exultation to the British minister and the partizans of hing-

Lnd. The natural result is, that the bank who lent money to men without capital, must in the end sustain losses incurred by their unfortuna e specula ions is well known to the public, who have latterly also discovered by the declarafion of Mr. Huskisson, late secretary of the British treasury, that a government owing a debt of more than seven hus dred millions of pound, sterling, and expending seventy millions of pounds eve ry year, had not the means of raising for the Walcheren expedition, a lerger sum in specie than 125,000l. serling.

This fict, together with the confes sions of lord Cawlercaga to sir John Moore, with respect to the in bility of the British government to supply the army is Spain with specie, and ab we all, the circum sance of gold being a a high premium for the purpose of hipping to the confinent of Europe, or recount of the exchange running 20 to 50 per cent. to the disadvantage of England, have a wakened a partion of the people of Great Britain and Ireland to an examination of the foundation of the circulating me dium. They can perceive nothing but but did not speak them. The day bewill in a short time produce an explosion that will prove dreadful in proper tion to the magnitude of the edifice which has been elected by British sel-fishness, piles, avarice, jealousy and credulity. The close commercial concreduity. The close commercial con-nexion which exists through mercautic agencies, and open and concealed part perships between the United States and Great! Britain, involving the fortunes of vast number of our chizens in the fate of the British financial system. ought to induce the people of the United States to scrutinize with caution the state of that nation, and the danger to which its perileus circums ances expose all who are that way or in any wise connected or dependent. Let them m ke an unpre-judiced calculation of the consequences that must result to a nation or to an individual animally encreasing his expenses and deb. whilst the means of supports ing such a system is continually dis inishing, and it will make them cautious of confiding too much to a mation thus circums anced. The true interest of the American people is to retire from the vortex of European dangers, full back upon their internal resources, and carry on a commerce within themselves, which on a trial will not only be found to yield a more permanent and advanta geous profit then foreign commerce, but will also render the United States muc pendent of foreign nations, and save us from participating in the broils of the European powers who may be yet for 20 years engaged in the destruction of each other, and who in the mean time will use every means in their power to engage us in their quarrels.
