

And methodically Arabic, Chaldean and Rabbinical Hebrew, and most of the modern languages, which he speaks and writes with purity. And this man, who passes eight hours every day in his studies, who has a correspondence with celebrated men in Europe, is still employed, as the minister of his brethren, in selling old cloths. Such is the power of education, which is every where overlooked. Nasci has no idea of the utility of the Indian Calabi language, and even thinks all its roots to be Hebrew. But the emperor of France has not refused the attempt to conquer these prejudices. He has begun with the military character; and by obliging them to defend the country in which they dwell, he hopes to subvert their other prejudices. By refusing no rational hope, he has encouraged their concurrence in the prosperity of France; and from Bordeaux, where the concession of the French kings in favor of the Portuguese Jews were registered, and where this people were most highly favored, he has obtained a President who has calmed the spirit of the nation, and obtained greater concessions from their prejudices, than has ever been obtained since their dispersion. The fears of Malouet dissipated, and this experiment is the boldest ever made in the religious world.
