PARIS, Oct 20. General Drouet, commanding the 9th corps of the army of Spain, writes on the 10th, that a courier which had just arrived from Valladolid, brings him the following intelligence:

On the 30th September, the prince of Essling, (Massena) arrived at Coimbra, one of the greatest cities of Portugal, situate about half way between Almeida and Lisbon; the French army had already marched upwards of 40 leagues since its departure from Almeida; its van and flank had several affairs with the militia and Portuguese regiments; it had taken more than 2500 prisoners, and disarmed seve al Portuguese regiments On the 27th September it had an engagement with the English army, which believed itself impregnable in a strong position, about a day's march from Ce imbra. The English were attacked, urned, and brisk ly pursued; they abandoned a part of their sick and of their magazines. The result of the affair of the 27th was 700 prisoners, of whom 400 are English, and two pieces of English atillery. But what was more important, the French had gained by that affair the superb positions of Mondego, and the city of Coimbra, which offers great resources.

The army was in good health and a-bundantly supplied with provisions.— They had sent the wounded to the hospital of Viscu, the greater part of whom received their wounds in the affair of the 27th, they amounted to scarce 500 men, sick included.
