friends of domestic manufactures had much cause to be satisfied. He recited the various encouragements which had been given to manufactures by congress, in permitting the importation of the raw materials free of duty, and in laying heavy duties on the importation of manufactured articles. On the whole he thought that as commerce and manufactures in fact were inseparable, they ought not to be divided by any regulation of the House.

The motion to amend was lost. On motion of Mr. Dawson the resolution respecting fortifications was amended by inserting the words, " land forces and preceding the word "fortifi-

On motion of Mr. Bassett the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, that so much as relates to the Navy of the United States be referred to a select committee.

The committee rose and reported the resolutions to the house, which were immediately adopted; and the several committees ordered to be appointed at-

Mr. Bacon remarked that at present doubt might exist whether the subject the defects in the non-intercourse aws, alluded to in the message, was referred to the committee of commerce and manufactures or the committee of foreign relations. To remove this doubt foreign relations. To remove this doubt he inoved the following resolution, which was agreed to:

Resolved. That so much of message of the president of the United States as relates to defects which may be found to exist in the provisions of the act concerning the commercial intercourse be-tween the United States and Great Britain and France, be referred to a committee of foreign relations.

Amendment to the Constitution.

Mr. Macon said that he had, late in the last session, laid upon the table a motion to amend the constitution of the United States. He had done it that time merely with a view to give notice of his intention to offer such a proposition at the present session. This amendment spoke so plainly for itself that it was unnecessary to explain it. It would be seen that its object was to prevent any member of congress from accepting an appointment in the presidential term during which he might be a member; for instance, it would go to prevent any member of the present congress from accepting an appointment under the present chief magistrate. The following is the resolution:

Resolved, By the senate and house of representatives of the United Stetes of America in congress assembled, two thirds of both houses concurring, that the following section be submitted to the legislatures of the several states, which when ratified by three fourths of the states shall be valid and binding as a part of the constitution of the United

" No senator or representative, after having taken his seat, shall during the time for which he was elected, be eligible to any civil appointment under the authority of the United States, nor shall any person be eligible to any such appointment until the expiration of the presidential term, during which such person shall have been a senator representative."

This resolve was on motion of Mr. Macon referred to a committee of the whole on the state of the Union.
