no inducement to conceal it from me, past promises, nothing has yet been since he is aware that I have always endone, and that there is no security that tertained the same desire. When I see him I will advert to this. I am not yet able to say, positively, who this new minister will be. Lord and some others are spoken of. Lord Wellesley has given me no other written information, on the subject, than is contained in his letter of the 22d ultimo, already communicated to you. His verbal information has been to the same effect, with this addition, that he retained his opinion, (mentioned in my unofficial let-ter to you of the 4th of January last,) that the minister to America ought to be a man of rank. As far as may be prudent—I shall not fail to do all that is in my power to expedite the appointment.

The letter from general Armstrong to which my letter, of the 8th instant, to lord Wellesley alludes, is dated the 14th of July; and expresses his wish, that the declaration of the British government, concerning the blockades, may be obtained and forwarded without

I enclose the Times newspaper of this morning, containing a copy of a French decree of the 5th inst. and of a letter, of the same date, from the Frenc! minister for foreign affairs to general Armstrong. The last is a most impor-tant paper; of which, I hope to receive, without delay, an official communication.

(COPY.) PROM MR PINKNEY TO LORD WELLES-LEY.

Great Cumberland Place, Aug. 21, 1810 MY LORD,

I have had the honour to receive your official note of the 18th instant, communicating the resolution of the British government to establish a blockade of the canal of Corfu, and shall not fail to transmit a copy of it, with as little delay as possible, to the sccretary of state of United States.

In the mean time I take the liberty, in parsuance of the sentiments of the President, heretofore signified to me, to observe to your lordship that, as a blockade essentially implies a force on the spot for the purpose, and as the notifi-cation required in the case must be a warning to neutral traders of the fact that a blockade exists, the communication, which your lordship has made to me, dorives its title to the acknowledge ments of the United States, from the supposition that it was meant as a friendpremonition, which, though imposing of itself no legal restraint on neutrals, nor inducing any penal consequences, might usefully influence the course of their mercantile expeditions. In this sense the communication will be received by the President, as a mark of that friendly attention which ought in all cases to be reciprocally maintained, and in this sense the President will be the more disposed to regard the communication, as a different one would contradict the definition of a blockade, and of uisite notification thereof, contained in the orders of the British govern-ment to commodore Hood and the judg. es of the vice admiralty courts, as com municated to the American government by Mr. Merry, on the 12th of April,

I have the honor to be, &c. (Signed) WM. PINKNEY.

> MR. PINKNEY TO MR. SMITH. London, Aug, 29th 1810.

I dined yesterday with lord Wellesley. and found that he had only returned to town in the morning. He still complained of indispotion; but it certainly could not be considered as unfitting him for business In a short conversation before dinner, he told me that my note respecting the Berlin and Milan decrees should be mentioned to his colleagues to day, and that I should have an immediate answer; that the affair of the Chesapeak "would be settled to my satisfaction;" that he believed he should recommend to the king the appointment of a minister plenipotentiary to the United States, either this week or the next; that he had two persons in his eye, (both | men of high rank) but that he could not with propriety name them to me at pre-As far as the opportunity permitted, I urged promptitude on all these subjects as indispensable, and expressed my confidence that they would be disposed of in season for the approaching meeting of Congress. You perceive that notwithstanding and that there is no security that we shall have any thing but promises. am truly disgusted with this; and would if I followed my own inclination put a speedy end to it. It is better however to do nothing of an irritating nature, until this government has had full time to act upon my note of the 25th. Even if it should decline to repeal the orders in council, (which I am told is quite possible) a moderate course on my part will have the recommendation of putting it more clearly in the wrong. If it should decline to repeal the President may be assured, that I will not fail to present such a paper, as conduct so extraordinary will demand; and if further delays are affected, that I shall remonstrate in very decided terms.

I have the honor to be. &c. (Signed) WM. PINKNEY. Hon. Robert Smith, Esq.

MR. PINKNEY TO GEN. ARMSTRONG. London, September 3d, 1810.

I received yesterday from lord Wellesley, an answer dated 31st of last month, to my note of the 25th, in which I commanicated to him the purport of your letter to me of the sixth, respecting the Berlin and Milan decrees; and I hasten to put yeu in possession (by a special messenger) of a copy of each of those papers, to be used according to your discretion.

It is extremely desirable that I should have, without loss of time, the benefit of such reflections upon this answer as you may be disposed to favor me with, and of such information, calculated to regulate my course with regard to it as your local position may enable you to furnish.

Your letters of the 6th and 7th ultimo concur in representing, (with perfect propriety, I think) that the revocation of the Berlin and Milan decrees is to take effect absolutely, after the lst of November, and I have so put it to the British government. You will let me know if any error (which I do not in the least suspect) has been discovered in this repesentation, or if it is necessary that the subject should be brought before this government in any other form than that which, looking to your representation, I have chosen.

You will perceive that the ple ige contained in Lord Wellesley's answer, is referred to the period when the repeal of the French edict shall have actually taken effect, and the commerce of neutral nations shall have been restored to the condition in which those edicts found it. In case there is nothing equivocal in these last expressions, the pledge is, I presume, sufficient for the present, if the recal of the French decrees does not depend on a condition precedent as some have supposed. If, on the other hand it is understood that, before the French repeal is to take effect, namely, before the 1st or 2d of November, Great Britain must revoke her orders in council, so that the orders shall cease to operate at the same moment with the decrees; or if it is understood that the British blockades, to which France objects, (that of May, 1806, for example,) must, be recalled, or declared not to be in force, before the same period; then undoubtedly the pledge is nothing. If the pledge is sufficient, we have only to let the matter rest until November; if it is insufficient. I cannot be too soon employed in taking a new course. I ought to mention, however, that I am now preparing a note to lord Wellesley, to be presented in a few days, concerning the blockades. This step is proper, and, I think, indispensable, whether the revocation of the decrees of France depends upon those blockades being put out of the way or

Begging you to let me hear from you as soon as convenient, I am sir, with great respect and consideration, your most obedient, humble servant-

METEORIC STONES.

Extract of a letter from Bishop Madison to Mr. Girardin of this city, dated Williamsburg, 27th November, 1810.

" I have lately received the stone which fell in North Carolina in January last, weighing 3 lbs. It resembles in appearance the meteoric stones of Europe and those which fell in Connecticut, in 1808, of which there is a minute account in the last volume of the American Philosophical Transactions. But this stone has a peculiarity, which I have not seen noticed in any other of the kind. It not only acts and is acted upon by the magnet; but is itself a real Magnet, having its distinct North and South Poles; and consequently all the other properties of the Magnet, though in a weak degree; a .tate in which the natural Magnet is often found; a strong additional presumption, thus afforded, that the stone is of terrestrial origin.

"I sent Queries to North Carelina which were anwered by a gentleman of character, who heard the explosions; and it is surprising, how nearly several of the Phanomena coincide with those observed in Connecticut." 75 The Bishop's opinion is; that these meteorie stones have been projected from the Volcanoes of the earth-he coincides with Mr. Wood in the idea, that they fall so far from the volcanoes, on account of the same point of the earth moving with different velocities in a diurnal rotation.

TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

The proprietors of newspapers in this city are induced, by what they believe their patrons will consider sufficient cause, to charge one additional dollar a year for their respective journals. In announcing this determination, they are bound respectfully to state their reasons:

The present price was confessedly moderate many years since; when their blank paper cost twenty to twenty five per cent. less than is now paid; when workmen's wages were lower by twelve per cent than they now are, and when types, from the comparative plenty of regulus of antimony, were more than thirty per cent below present prices.—
On these considerations, the daily papers of other cities are one to three dol lars a year higher than those of Baltimore: In New York, several are ten; others nine; in Philadelphia, none are published at a less subscription price than eight dollars.

From a view of these facts, thus succinctly stated, the proprietors confident ly hope that the reasonableness of their demand will be universally acknow ledged: They have therefore concluded. to charge the additional dollar per annum from the first of January next.
