BY FINLEY JOHNSON.

My mother died ere I could scarce Breathe her beloved name, And o'er my childhood's sunny path, Dark clouds of sourow came; . . My bark of life was wrecked upon Misfortune's hidden reef. And ere bright manhood on me dawned, I had wept tears of grief, And now I seek my mother's grave, That not one soul may see

How dark the shadows are that throw

Their sombre bues o'er me. The birds are in the merry glen, The summer's flowers boom, But I their beauties leave to sit Beside my mother's tomb. And there I watch in solem thought, Some bright star in the sky; ... And think within its depths I see My mother's gentle eye,

And happy dreams within me rise, My sorrowing heart to cheer, I think-although to me unseen, Her loving spirit 's near.

I mix among my fellow men Within the marts of trade; But, oh, my mind is far away Beneath the willow's shade, And though the world has many charms, Which other hearts may see, Yet, oh, the brightest of them all Posses no joys for me,

For oft my mother's gentle form In memory's waves I view, And then I pray, that I like her,-May be un angel too. BULTIMORE, Md.
