From Godey's Ladys' Book. WE'LL SET AGAIN. BY LOTHE ALICE LUCE.

"We'll meet again!"-the parting hour Hath many a charm to lure; lts mem'ries have a winning power, An influence chaste and pure, That in the heart of hearts survive, When joys and bopes are vain-But none these few short words outlive,

When fond affection binds; In traversing life's weary sound, The lonely pilgrim finds A bliss where all was grief before, A joy where all was pain. When mem'ry calls to him once more, "We'll meet again."

"We'll meet again!"-thou noble one That round my heart hast cast A halo, when all else is gone, Will cling unto the last :== Know that each note of the breast Echoes this sweet refrain. When the soul seeks its final rest, We'll meet again."

"We'll meet again"-if not on earth. Oh look above and see The spirit that around thy hearth Would chime sweet melody; Of all thou wert or art to me, There'll be this holy strain To bear my spirit back to thee, "We'll meet again ""
