[From The Methodist.] HARVEST-TIME.

BY FREDERICK J. WATTS.

The ripening grain, like ocean's roll, When fearful storms prevail, Bends to the murmuring winds's control. And gayly sports the gale.

It stands matured in Nature's mould With head erect and high, And garbed in dress of brightest gold, Points upwards to the sky.

Bright emblem of the life of man, It blooms but to decay, At most its stay is but a span, And early fades away. Like all the verdure of the earth,

'Tis withered by the Sun:

By them it is undone. Blest is the thought that bounteous God Refuses not to give From out his store in Nature's sod, The germ for man to live.

The very beams that gave it birth,

Refuses not to rich or poor The fruits they would obtain; He gives from His abundant store To all who praise His name.

Alike to all who pray and weep, His blessings here are given; The good we sow, ten-told we'll reap In harvest-time in heaven. KENT ISLAND,

OUR NATIONAL SINS.

Religion is obliged to take the most retired seat in legislative circles, and too, under protest.—

The time has come—and we hope almost gone—in the history of this great country when a Minister of the Gospel is looked upon by the multitude as having advanced far beyond his legitimate sphere when he expresses, most mild-liv, his views on any of the great questions of the day, either in public or in private. And if a day is in the center of the Union? Why is it JAMESD. MANSFIELD
