[From the New York Mercury] A Mother's Love. BY HENRY HITCHCOCK.

Ah, once I had a mother dear, A mother kind and true; The gust of angels, she now dwells Beyond the ether blue.

But 'tis my faith, and oh, how sweet! That still she smiles on me, As when I heard her gentle voice When here she used te be.

Her heart is just as loving now, Her smiles are just as sweet, As when she dwelt among us here, And loved dear friends to greet.

The granite rock may fall to dust, The sun may cease to shine; All other love but one may fail, That love, dear one, is thine. O dearest mother! when you went Away and left this shore, The treasure was that moment lost, No mortal can restore. But faith consoles us, and we feel That we still have thy love;

Then meet in Heaven above. Ah, whether here upon the earth, Or above the stars of night. The same true loving guide thou art,

Whose lamp e'er burneth bright.

Awhile on earth we wait and pray,

Sweet spirit, may we ever fell That thou art very near, That we are loved and smiled upon By thee, our mother.

1. Man's entrance into the world. 2. His progress through the world.

3. His exit from the world; and 4. Practical reflections from what may be said. First, then

1. Man came into this world naked and bare. 2. His progress through it is trouble and 3. His exit from it none can tell where.

4. But if he does well here, he'll do well there. Now I can say no more, my brethren dear. Should I preach on this subject from this time to next year.
