[From the Baltimore American.] REBEL WOMEN,

Rebel Women! Ye who first Hatred's deadly upas nursed, See, it bears its fruit accursed, Rebel womem!

Ye who cherished day and night, Malice, mischiel, hate and spite, Bringing in all homes a blight. Rebel women!

Ye who, weaned from womanhood,

Yearned to bathe your land in blood, Holding evil your best good, Rebel women! hormer Ye who promised at their source

Childhood's sweetness, manhood's force, Armed your sons without remorse Rebel women!

Set the Rebel flag affoat, Rebel women! Look upon your work to-day, See the vile assassin slay, See hell's fiends in wildest play,

Flying at your country's throat,

Echoing treason's sharpest note,

Rebel women! Lo! the subtil poison works, 'Neath tair show the dagger lurks, Murder all our beaven murks,

Rebel women! See the chiestain, whose pure, high skill Guiding his unfounted will, Shaping ever good from ill,

Rebel women!

Rebel women.

Whose large heart, and ample brain Only labored to attain Peaceful end to all our pain,

Heart and brains are now quite still! Ye who only breathed "kill," "kill," Armed the hand that did this ill, Rebel women!

See the statesman pale with thought, Gray with years that wisdom brought, Who from chase order wrought, Rebel women!

On his couch with pain so pale, Old and helpless; there assail, There may murder quick prevail, Rebel women!

Smite him with a dagger blest Which your lips have eager prest, And the murderer caressed, Rebel women!

So I charge you with this crime, Blackest in the tales of time, And I write it in a rhyme, Rebel women!

For I know your cruel arts,

Know the cunning of your hearts, Know you're shaped wars fiercest darts, Rebel women! Ever smiling, speaking low,

While hell fires were burning slow, False and proud ye are I know Rebel women! Scouting nature, kindred, blood,

Kindling men to finenish mood, Rebel women! All your beauty turned to bane, Lite's endearments ye profane,

Raising Passion's tide to flood,

Cruel that ye are and vain, Rebel women! On our land looked out! alack!

Lo! our hanners bound in black, Ye, the real Ravaillac, Rebel women!

Yours the hand that aimed the blow; Ye have laid our leader low; Ye, the prompting cause, I know, Rebel women!

In the solomn, holy tide That our Lord was crucified, Bloodier memories henceforth bide Rebel women!

Was it Pontus Pilate's deed That to death our Lord decreed, Or the Jews that made him bleed? Rebel women?

So hath wrought your hate and rage 'Gainst the man who cleansed this age From its foulest heritage-Rebel woman!

Took away our nation's stain, Purified it by his pain; His the grief and yours the gain,

Rebel woman!

Stand aside while we embalm, His memory in enduring calm, Placing in his hand the palm, Rebel wemen!

Morning comes when he shall rise, Filling Fame's resplendent skies, And his foemen paralyze, Rebel woman!

Covering all your heads with shame At the shadow of his name, Fixing on you this black blame Rebel womam!
