"LEE'S SURRENDER."

Spring, the beautiful, green-robed maiden, Angel of Earth a daughter of Aiden, Or marked an era's greater splendor Than that beheld in "Lee's surrender."

Many a time, in many a land, Where war and sorrow stalked hand in hand, The groaning people have prayed them cease, But in that farm house, plain and old, Not for the conquest of that one man,

But that his demon cause is dead. Authorized Agent. Slavery, Slavery never again American's soverign soil shall stain, Blood and sorrow have marked its tomb.

In that old farm-house amid the trees.

Were written and sealed the kind decrees How noble the mind at that nation's helm. Which they have striven to overwhelm, And how, when justice were fearful sower. Lore magnanimous ruled the hour.

And lade the air with their rich perfume; Well might the delicate, snow-white spray Of cherry-blossoms I hold to-day Smile in beauty on that grand scene, And bade war's terrible havoc cease Under the starry gleam of peace.

Looked on the faces of those two men; Grant, the victor whose glorious name Will brighten the "deathless scroll of fame," And Lee, whose courage and skill combined, Are worth a cause of noble kind.

Had I been a bird, when armies brave Beheld our banner all proudly wave (That emblem of treason, base and low); Had I heard their shouts, and seen the cheek Have plumed my wings for the land of rest.

Oh, beautiful Sabbath of palm and rose, A symble of national repose the shortest notice. The public's obedient serv't Nearly two thousand of years ago, Under the shade of the waving palm, The Prince of Peace, devine and calm, Rode into the holy city, and we To day the fruits of his coming see.

He died on the cross that we might live; He was our God, and He still doth give Some spirits God-liked to bless this carth, And our martyr chief with these has birth; Spring & Summer He lived that a cause of wars might cease, Hurried his soul through the pearly gate.

> Oh, well in this hour of jubilee May woman's delicate cheek grow pale, And strong men tremble with rage amid grief, At thoughts of their noble, murdered chief,
