O, brothers and sisters growing old, Do you all rember yet That home, in the shade of rustling trees, Where once our household met?

COMING HOME.

Do you know how we used to come from school, Through the summer's pleasant heat; With the yellow feanel's golden dust On our tired little feet?

And how sometimes in an idle mood We loitered by the way ; And stopped in the woods to gather flowers, And in the fields to play :

Till warmed by the deepening shadow's fall, That told of the coming night, We climbed to the top of the last, long bill, And saw our home in sight?

And brothers and sisters, older now Than she whose life is o'er, Do you think of the mother's loving face That looked from the open door?

That home in the dust is low; And that loving smile was hid from us, In the darkness, long ago! And we have come to life's last hill,

Alas! for the changing things of time!

Can almost look on that home that shines Eternal in the skies. So, brothers and sisters, as we go, Still let us move as one,

From which our weary eyes
