ARE FOR HELMSOLD'S From the Saturday Evening Post. OLD SONGS. 3 2 4 E. M.

Once more, dear friends, another song, We'll make the rafters ring, Sing sweet and clear, sing loud and long, Porget the world and sing.

The songs thro' other days that rung, To-night be yours and mine; "We sing the songs our fathere sung In days of sald lang syne."

Now let the joyful measures rise, And hope's inspiring lays, And let them echo to the skies The songs of other days.

Hark! as the echoes fall around, And dies the murmuring tone, Unearthly voices catch the sound, And mingle with our own. What is there in that sacred pealm,

And dims the eye with tears? Voices of loved ones swell the strain Who left us long age ; They make divise the soft refrain,

Thro' all the fleeting years,

That fills the soul with holy calm

Bo solemn, sad, and low. Forms of the loved and saintly dead, Although my earthly -ear May not discern your noiseless tread, I know that ye are here.

When these sweet songs like incense rise To happier homes above, Ye swell the notes beyond the skies, And join the songs ye love.
