The Registry Law.

Notwithstanding the occasional thrusts that are made at the Registry law and those of the Union party who contributed to its enactment, by the rebel press of the State, we are fully convinced that the masses of the people regard it as being just as necessary for the protection of loyal men as the law against larceny is for the protection of the community against the depredadons of evil-minded men. The maliguant spirit exhibited by the opponents of the law; their vehement denunciation of every one who is suspected of being in favor of it, constitute the very best evidence of its necessity. The means employed to procure a repeal of the law furnish proof that its framers had a very clear conception of the rebel character, the chief characteristic of which is to vility and persecute all who but they take good care not to tell us why it happens that they are thus excluded.
