I had the best of medical attendance the whole of the time. My cough was so very bad that it racked me very much. I at this time raisand the best of them, but they could do nothing for me, and at that time I was nothing but skin and bones. I then was in the western part of Missouri In June last we left there for the East, and in Au gust last we came to New York, and I was so reduced that I could only walk a little with me husband's belp. After I had been here a short time the salt water breeze made me feel much better for a time and then I had again to call a physician for aid. We had four of the best physicians of New York on the diseases of somewhat aromatic; their tastes bitterish, and analo the lungs, and doctors of all kinds, but of no avail.— They said I was past cure, and that my lungs were I was on my feet about the house, not able to do much of anything. Popping Corn.

And there they sat popping corn, John Sules and Susan Cutter: John Stiles was as stout as an ox, And Susan lat as butter.

There they sat and shelled the corn, And raked and stirred the fire; And talked of different kind of ears, And hitched their chairs up nigher.

Then Susan she the poppef shook, Then John he shook the popper; Till both their faces grew as red. As saucepans made of copper.

Then they shelled and popped and ate. All kinds of tun a poking, And be haw-hawed at her remarks, And she laughed at his joking.

And still they popped, and still they ate, (John's mouth was like a hopper.) And stirred the fire and sprinkled salt, And shook and shook the popper,

And still the corn kept popping; It struck eleven, then it struck twelve, And still no signs of stopping.

The clock struck nine, the clock struck ten,

John he ate, and Sue she thought-The corn did pop and patter, Till John cried out, "The corn's afire! Why, Susan, what's the matter?"

Sue said, "John Stiles, it's one o'clock, You'll die of indigestion; I'm sick of all this propping corn, Why don't you pop the question ?
