MY CHILD'S ORIGIN. One night as old St. Peter slept, He left the door of Heaven ajar, When through a little angle crept, And came down with a falling star.

One summer, as the blessed beams Of morn approached, my bleshing bride Awake from sweet and plesant dreams, And found that angle by her side.

God grant but this-I ask no more-That when he leaevs this world of sin, He'll wing his way to that bright shore, And find the door of Heaven again!

without any immagination, and not possessed of that afternoon's mischief. of the "divine afflatus," has attempted to destroy the illusion of . . as follows:

ST. PETER'S REPLY. Full eighteen hundred years or more, I've kept my door securely tiled-There has no little angel stayed, Nor one been missing all the while.

I did not sleep as you suppose, Nor left the door of Heaven ajar. Nor has a little angel lelt, And gone down with a falling star.

Go ask the blushing bride, and see If she don't frankly own and say, That when she found that angel babe,

God grant but this-I ask no more-That should your number still enlarge, That you will not do as before,

And lay it tookt. Peter's charge! Joy Cometh in the Morning.

BY WILLIAM CULLEN BRYANT. Oh, deem not they are best alone Whose lives a peaceful tenor keep, For God, who pittes men, hath shown

A blessing for the eye that weep.

The light of smiles shall fill again. The lids that overflow with tears; And weary hours of wee and pain Are promises of happier years.

There is a day of sunny test For every dark and troubled night, And grief may hide an evening guest, But joy shall come with every light.

Nor let the good man's trust depart,

Though with a pierced and broken heart, And spurned of men he goes to die. For God hath marked each sorrowing day,

Though life its common gifts deny;

And numbered every secret tear, And heaven's long age of bliss shall pay For all his children suffer here.
